Coggeshall and McClelland Are Found Guilty

JUDGE SENTENCES YOUTHS TO CHAIR; APPEAL VERDICT

Wright Death Trial Jury Returns First-Degree Murder Decision After Two and Half Hours.

NO EMOTION SHOWN BY DOOMED PAIR

Scarborough, Third Boy Who Turned State's Witness, Goes on Trial in Eatonton Today.

Eatonton, Ga., May 6.—After deliberating two and a half hours from the time they received the case, a jury here tonight returned a verdict of guilty without recommendation to mercy, against Ted Coggeshall and F. W. McClelland, charged with the murder of Professor W. C. Wright, Putnam county school superintendent on the morning of March 4. The verdict carries with it automatically the sentence of death. After receiving the verdict Judge J. B. Park, of the Oconee circuit, fixed May 29, 1925, as the date of their execution in the chair at Milledgeville.

McClelland and Coggeshall, soon after being placed in jail here after sentence was pronounced, were moved to Macon to be lodged in the Bibb county jail. Sheriff A. J. Walton with two deputies were in charge of the two prisoners.

Verdict Received Stojically. The youthful defendants, found guilty of slaying Professor Wright, largely on the testimony of Sam J. Scarborough, their companion, received the verdict stoically and without sign of any emotion. The aged father of Coggeshall, who has stuck by his son through the trial, also received the verdict with scarcely any sign of stress.

Coggeshall and McClelland received the verdict in silence. Not a sound could be heard in the courtroom for a full minute after the verdict was handed to Judge Park by Foreman L. M. Pennington. Just after the verdict was read, the courtroom clock chimed out 10 o'clock, that struck like a death knell to the youthful slayers. Coggeshall swallowed several times but no change of expression came in his face.

McClelland stared vacantly at the judge. About 20 people were in the court room when the verdict was read. Attorney William Schley Howard, announced after the verdict, he would file a petition for a new trial Thursday morning. Coggeshall and McClelland were told to stand before the judge for sentence. Judge Park informed them of the sentence and asked if they had anything to say.

"Not Guilty." "I have only one thing to say, and that is that I am not guilty of this crime, and knew nothing about it," Coggeshall said. "I also want to say we had nothing to do with this crime and are not guilty," McClelland said. Judge Park told the boys he was only the mouthpiece of the law and sympathized with them and also sympathized with the aged father. Judge Park said the circumstances in the case were against both of them.

Before pronouncing sentence, Judge Park complimented people of Putnam county for the excellent spirit of law and order that prevailed. As Judge Park fixed May 29 as date for execution, both defendants received the announcement stoically. They were taken to the jail in Eatonton after the sentence.

When they returned to the jail both Coggeshall and McClelland broke down and cried. Both protested they were innocent. "I hate this worst of all, because of my father and mother," Coggeshall said between sobs. The elder Coggeshall declared he was confident his son was innocent and said he would fight to the last to save his life. "If they electrocute this boy and I carry his body back to Illinois, I know I will be bearing home an innocent man," he said. McClelland had no relative or friend with him at the trial.

Chatted While Waiting. While waiting in the courtroom for the jury to return its verdict, the accused youths chatted with each other and with Coggeshall's father. They also read copies of Atlanta newspapers containing accounts of the tragic warehouse fire.

The jury took only one ballot according to Foreman Pennington. Most

LIGHTS OF NEW YORK

As Seen By-- Pierre Van Paassen

New York, May 6.—Greenwich Village, rendezvous of artists, writers, intellectuals, unrecognized genius and their patron saints has lost its atmosphere long ago. Of course, they're all still poets living in garrets, and young ladies still sip endless cups of coffee in the candlelit rooms of some inn, while they discuss sex, birth control and emancipation, but the whole thing carries an air of artificiality.

It is not the genuine Bohemian thing of long ago. In all my wanderings up and down the village I have not discovered a single poet who was starving, but instead saw a legion of girls wearing the most boyish bob while affecting the most mannish clothes.

When the lights begin to twinkle Greenwich Village is invaded by tourists and tired business men with their female escorts who come here to buoy up their jaded appetites and hope for some startling excitement. Shops, restaurants and guides enter to those people and try to impart something of the old glamour, but it's of no use. It is like foreigners flocking to the Montmartre district in Paris.

Though every human being has a touch of ego and is not averse to holding the center of the stage, this thing of being held up as public curiosities must have palled on the minds of the old villagers, with the result that they scattered.

Those signs: "Watch your hat and coat" are not put up without reason. In fact they should not be hung in restaurants alone. My coat disappeared from a tree in my own office today while I had stepped out for a moment. Across the street in a church where I drop in occasionally to hear a noon-day service, I noticed a sign: "Do not leave your purse on the seat beside you, not even for a minute."

At the close of a parlor meeting where the recent political events in Germany were discussed, one young lady with dreamy exotic Slavic eyes asked me what I thought of New York. When I replied that it did not seem a bad place, she cried out in horror: "How can you say that?"

She herself came from Moscow and had been here three years. "Surely New York is to be preferred above Moscow," I countered. "Perhaps it is, but you don't know how it palls on the senses. I think that to be made love to by a whiskered Bolshevik must be something of a diversion after all." I was just about going to tell her that Bolsheviks have no monopoly on the gentle art, when I caught my wife's eye.

"There is nothing so distressing and pitiful as the sight of these old, stably-dressed men sunning

FEAR ENTERTAINED FOR THEIR SAFETY

Plane, Which Was Last Seen About 120 Miles From Memphis, Appeared To Be In Trouble.

Memphis, Tenn., May 6.—A special dispatch late tonight said that the airplane containing Major General Mason M. Patrick, chief of the army air service, and Captain St. Clair Street, was believed to have made a forced landing at a point about two miles east of Johnsonville, Tenn., shortly after 6 o'clock tonight.

Memphis, Tenn., May 6.—According to reports received at the Memphis office of the Nashville, Chattanooga and St. Louis railroad late tonight, an airplane, thought to contain Major Mason M. Patrick, chief of the army air service, and his pilot, Captain St. Clair Street, was seen flying close to the tree tops in the vicinity of Johnsonville, Tenn., shortly after 6 o'clock tonight.

Johnsonville is located approximately 120 miles from Memphis. The plane containing the army officers left Memphis tonight at 6 o'clock, en route to Nashville.

According to reports received at the railroad offices, the plane appeared to be in trouble when seen near Johnsonville.

PATRICK HAD NOT ARRIVED IN NASHVILLE AT 11 O'CLOCK. Nashville, Tenn., May 6.—Major General Mason M. Patrick, chief of the army air service, was reported to have left Memphis for Nashville in a biplane at 5 o'clock this afternoon, but had not arrived here at 11 o'clock tonight, said Lieutenant Vincent J. Moley, instructor in the 103rd observation squadron, of Nashville. The flying time is about two hours.

Lieutenant Moley said that he had heard officials in Washington, D. C., that General Patrick had not reached Nashville and was also wiring other points in an effort to gain information of his whereabouts.

A delegation of army officers, who had gone to Blackwood Field, near Nashville, to greet General Patrick, returned at dark.

LEFT MEMPHIS FIELD AT 5 O'CLOCK WEDNESDAY. Memphis, Tenn., May 6.—Major General Mason M. Patrick, chief of the army air service, was reported to have left Memphis for Nashville at 5 o'clock this afternoon, but had not arrived in Nashville as soon as expected tonight, according to reports received here.

Captain St. Clair Street, chief of the airway section of the air service, arrived here at 4:10 this afternoon, and reported that his machine had given them no trouble during the trip from Little Rock to Memphis.

of 112 East Merritts avenue, and Billy Bob Page, 12 of East Lake. The five who were graded as superior were Willie Mac Goswick, 13, of 429 Ormond street; Thomas H. Thomas, Jr., 15, of 214 Third avenue; Evelyn Weaver, 12, of 66 Jones avenue; Eloise Duncan, 15, of 230 South Main street, College Park, and Edna Reid, 10, of the same address. Many of the children who took the tests Wednesday were accompanied by their parents, and others were accompanied by friends who witnessed the tests applied. Professor Peacock directed the use of the famous "Seashore" psychological tests, using special photograph records which tested each applicant's sense of pitch, time, harmony, rhythm, etc., while Mr. Coddington made his tests according to physical characteristics, penmanship, etc. A remarkable thing in the result was that each of the two psychological experts, in their independent findings, were absolutely agreed on eight out of the nine children who showed the best results from the tests.

PACIFIC DEFENSES SHOWN DEFECTIVE BY WAR MANEUVER

Joint Army-Navy Tests Reveal Serious Weakness in Resistance Power of Oahu Island.

DEFECTS IN FLEET ALSO DISCLOSED

Admiral McDonald Declares Pearl Harbor Is Not an Adequate Naval Base.

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

Honolulu, May 6.—The battle of Oahu and the most extensive army maneuvers ever conducted by the United States disclosed defects in both the island defenses and the fleet, which have been made the basis of a special report and recommendations to the secretaries of war and navy, the chief umpires announced in a non-committal communique issued following the conclusion of the critique shortly before noon today.

The umpires, Admiral Robert E. Coontz and Major General John L. Limes, recommended that the department make "the resisting power of Oahu of the strongest possible character," pointing out that these defenses constitute the key to the Pacific.

The communique discussed none of the controversial questions which developed during the actions of the war game.

The issuance of the communique officially ended the third grand joint army and navy maneuvers, which lasted from April 15 to 27.

Fleet Leaves Today. Finishing touches in the arrangements for departure of the fleet for minor maneuvers including torpedo practice, in this vicinity, were being given today. The fleet will leave tomorrow in sortie formation on a two-day cruise, putting in at Laysan, Island of Maui, on Saturday evening to remain there until May 18 when the ships will make a local cruise.

The fleet will return to Laysan on May 25. Concentration of the fleet forces at Pearl Harbor will end June 8 when the ships will be reassigned. Some of the smaller craft will proceed to Australia and New Zealand, early in July, while other craft will return to mainland stations in the United States after what is believed to be the longest maneuver period ever carried out by the United States.

Eleven umpires, Colonels F. P. Lahn, W. W. Cruikshank, H. J. Brees, J. K. Partello, C. S. Lincoln, W. S. Short, Lieutenant Colonel W. H. Raymond and Majors John S.

WILSON COLLEGE PLANS LAUNCHED

Pleasant Stovall, Life-Long Friend of Woodrow Wilson, Presides at Meeting.

Launching a state-wide campaign to raise the first portion of the funds necessary for the establishment of the Woodrow Wilson college at Valdosta, several hundred leading citizens of Georgia met Wednesday at a luncheon at the Capital City club.

The proposal college is to be a living memorial to the late war president of the United States, a man whose, as speakers said Wednesday to the noblest heights mankind has ever reached, and who began his life as a Georgian. Georgia's tribute to a Georgian, is the slogan adopted by the organization which will perpetuate through a great shrine of learning and character-building, the ideals which Woodrow Wilson kept ever before the world through the darkest hours of its most trying ordeal.

Cupid Vaults Prison Walls To Wed Pair

Cleveland Actress Weds Prisoner at Federal Pen in Strange Ceremony.

Uncle Sam and the strong arm of the law Wednesday surrendered to cupid at the Atlanta federal penitentiary when the little blind god vaulted the wall of the prison and united in marriage, E. F. Day, 44, of Detroit, under sentence of four years for using the mails to defraud, and Mrs. Almada Allread, 24-year-old actress, of Cleveland, Ohio.

The marriage is said to have been the culmination of a romance, which had its beginning in Canada several years ago. Day was tried and convicted under the name of J. C. Black and is serving his sentence under that name, according to reports.

Many marriages have taken place in Georgia, but this is the first brand new one ever to take place behind the walls of the grim gray federal institution, where more than 3,000 men are incarcerated, according to officials.

CONSTITUTION WILL FORWARD GIFTS FOR FIRE RELIEF

At the request of Chief W. B. Cody and members of council's fire committee, The Constitution will receive and forward to such proper authorities as may be designated, contributions to the relief of the families of the six firemen who made the supreme sacrifice in the Decatur street disaster Wednesday morning.

Four of the slain men were members of the Firemen's Benevolent association, and their survivors will receive a small sum from this organization, and four of the six families will receive another small sum in the form of city pensions. Insurance carried by all six was insignificant.

The meager sums which the dependents of the six men will receive from all sources cannot be compared to the sacrifice they nobly made for the protection of Atlanta citizens, and an assurance from Fire Chief Cody and members of the councilmanic fire committee that financial assistance will be needed. The Constitution gladly undertakes to receive and forward funds for the relief of the families of the dead men.

Every person who wishes to contribute to this worthy cause is invited to mail check or cash to The Atlanta Constitution until further notice is given.

Atlantans Are Asked To Aid Families of Victims of Fire

An appeal to the big-heartedness of Atlantans for assistance for families of the six brave firemen killed in the Decatur street fire early Wednesday morning, was issued Wednesday afternoon by Chief W. B. Cody and members of the fire committee of city council, through The Constitution.

Two of the men, one of whom provided the sole means of support for an aged mother and a widowed sister, will not receive a cent in pensions from the city, examination of the records showed. Others will receive some funds but insurance carried by the men amounted to practically nothing and several of the families are left penniless, dependent only on the small pensions that they will receive.

"I think that the public owes it to these men to see that their families are amply provided for," Chief Cody said. "The men entered the burning building with but one thought in mind—that of protecting life and the property of taxpayers."

"Two of the families under the city's laws will receive nothing. The other four all will get something but what is the pittance that the city will pay them in comparison to life surrendered in the interest of saving taxpayers' property?"

"One of the men, Pat Wilson, was the sole support of his 88-year-old mother and a sister, whose husband's death a short time ago left her dependent on her brother."

"However, because Pat was not married, the city will pay his family not a cent. He was not even a member of the Firemen's Benevolent association and the small insurance policy carried by him will give his family all the money that they will receive. It is not a question that is directly up to the people for whom this man gave his life—the people of Atlanta?"

"In addition to supporting his mother and sister, he was making small payments on a little home. It is a certainty that his mother and sister cannot keep up these payments."

Nashville, May 6.—Delegates elected to the annual conferences of the Methodist Episcopal church, south, when the question of unification with the Methodist Episcopal church will be voted upon, will go uninstructed, under resolutions adopted by the college of bishops late today.

The resolutions declared that the delegates should be allowed to assert their freedom of choice on questions at issue and not be hampered by instructions on votes to be cast.

The right of the conferences to express their views by resolution on any question at issue was undisturbed by the resolution.

JOINT SERVICES FOR SIX VICTIMS AT AUDITORIUM

Drastic Changes in Fire Prevention Laws To Be Sought Following Ghastly Disaster.

ASK CONSTITUTION TO PRESENT APPEAL

Wave of Sympathy Sweeps City Following Fire in Which Six Firemen Lost Lives.

Somewhat recovered from the staggering shock of the tragedy which claimed the lives of six members of the Atlanta fire department and brought injury and suffering to eight others, officials and friends of the department Wednesday night took up the burden of providing for the families of the slain heroes and bent their efforts toward securing passage of protective laws that will prevent a recurrence of the ghastly disaster that marked the Jass Manufacturing company fire early Wednesday on Decatur street.

While families of the six slain men were arranging for a great public funeral from the city auditorium Friday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock, Fire Chief W. B. Cody and member of the councilmanic fire committee, late Wednesday requested The Constitution to issue an appeal for funds to care for dependents of the gallant men who sacrificed their lives in defense of the city's property and safety.

Alderman Jesse W. Armistead, of the fire committee, announced that he would appeal to council to make a substantial donation out of public funds for this purpose, and all present at fire headquarters pledged their heartiest cooperation to the movement.

Donations Begin Early. No sooner had night editions of The Constitution made their appearance on the streets of the city than citizens began calling to ask for information concerning the appeal for funds, and City Clerk Walter C. Taylor phoned in the first pledge of $50.

"Every Atlanta man and woman who appreciates the constant state of personal safety which the wonderful efficiency of our fire department makes possible," he declared, "should immediately contribute to The Constitution's fund. I desire to be the first to register my tribute to these heroic men."

Shortly after announcement was made by Gus Castle, in charge of arrangements for the Dixie Motor-cycle Rally and Gypsy Tour to be staged June 13 at Lakewood park, that 25 per cent of the gate receipts from the events will be turned over to the firemen's relief fund.

New Laws Are Asked. Meanwhile, sentiment looking to passage of adequate fire prevention laws—both city and state—was crystallizing among fire committee members and citizens in general, and Chief Cody, in a statement to The Constitution, declared that the tragedy of Wednesday morning forcefully emphasized the glaring need of a fire marshal in Atlanta.

The chief pointed out that only two

Ready for Dash To North Pole

BY JAMES B. WHARTON.
(Special Dispatch to The Constitution and the North American Newspaper Alliance.)

King's Bay, Spitzbergen, May 6.—At any hour now the two flying boats that will be used by the Amundsen-Ellsworth polar expedition in an attempt to reach the North Pole in a 600-mile non-stop flight will take off from here for the airplane base to be established to the north. If the weather does not turn bad the planes will refuel and hop off for the pole the day they arrive at the base.

The expedition's two ships, the Farm and the Hobby, have left to reconnoiter for favorable landing places on either Dunes or Amsterdam Island or perhaps in the open water beyond those islands.

The hop-off for the North Pole may occur within 24 hours or nine days. Everything depends upon the weather and the condition of the ice. This wide margin is due to the uncertainty of these factors. The skin of our wings and our plans was drawn together and dripped with almost incredible rapidity. A few days ago we felt fixed here. Today we may stand on the eve of a great historical incident, a geographical exploration that abounds in mystery and the possibility of valuable discoveries.

of the two and half hours were taken up in going to supper and returning to the courthouse. The actual deliberation lasted less than 30 minutes.

Not the slightest sign of a demonstration greeted the return of the verdict. The jury, which did not come as a surprise to those who have followed the case closely. The crowd maintained perfect order during the trial under the direction of Sheriff Joe Walton.

Under the sentence imposed by Judge Park the convicted boys will be held in the custody of Sheriff Joe Walton of Putnam county until May 10, and on that date he will turn them over to the prison commission. The commission will send them to Milledgeville where they will be held until Friday, May 20, when they will be executed, unless a new trial is granted, or an appeal is taken to the supreme court, in case a new trial is denied.

Scarborough Trial Today.

S. J. Scarborough, who turned informer, will be placed on trial Thursday morning according to his attorney, Gordon Calloway. It is expected that his case will be submitted to a jury on an agreed statement of facts, in the hope he will be given a life sentence.

Perhaps no more spectacular fight against desperate odds has ever been waged in behalf of a client, than was battled by William Schley Howard, of Atlanta, and Judge J. B. Pottle, of Milledgeville, in an effort to save the accused youths from the electric chair.

Mountain. We stopped a few minutes and looked at the mountain and the town. We saw the town of Stone Mountain. We saw the town of Stone Mountain. We saw the town of Stone Mountain.

One of the most spectacular features of the trial was the development of a large number of witnesses to the identity of the three boys in the Atlanta-Atlanta highway, while an even greater number swore to seeing them on the Eaton-Madison highway, at almost exactly the same hour and dates.

History of Case.

No criminal case in the history of Putnam county has stirred the people as has the case of the attack on Professor Wright. The educator was shot on the Eaton-Madison highway on March 4, when he picked up two young men tramping their way north. A short time later he was driven and stopped to pick up a third man. One of the men whom Scarborough declared was Coggeshall, struck Professor Wright over the head with an automobile spring. McClelland dragged the body out of the automobile, shot Coggeshall twice, and delivered several other blows on the unconscious man. The three youths then fled in the car owned by Professor Wright and later were captured near Athens.

Prior to the delivery of arguments by counsel for the state and defense, the outstanding developments of the trial were the unexpected appearance of the witness, Coggeshall, who made statements, not under oath, concerning their movements on the day of the crime, and for several days before and after the crime was committed. Their testimony claiming an absolute alibi came as a sensational climax to a trial which has stirred the whole state.

Another interesting feature was the appearance of George Remus, Cincinnati millionaire bootleg king, who engaged in some good-natured banter with the state and defense attorneys, which provided a light relief for the sordid drama enacted here in the courtroom. In the last few hours, Remus' testimony was in connection with a conversation he declared he held with Scarborough in the Athens jail, in which he said Scarborough told him he would be taken care of if he stayed in the county jail.

Witnesses who swore they had seen the trio of youths at Grays, Ga., at noon, Wednesday, March 4, the day Professor Wright was attacked, were produced by the state, who identified the youths as the same as were seen driving with Professor Wright on the day of the murder.

Mountain. We stopped a few minutes and looked at the mountain and the town. We saw the town of Stone Mountain. We saw the town of Stone Mountain. We saw the town of Stone Mountain.

One of the most spectacular features of the trial was the development of a large number of witnesses to the identity of the three boys in the Atlanta-Atlanta highway, while an even greater number swore to seeing them on the Eaton-Madison highway, at almost exactly the same hour and dates.

History of Case.

No criminal case in the history of Putnam county has stirred the people as has the case of the attack on Professor Wright. The educator was shot on the Eaton-Madison highway on March 4, when he picked up two young men tramping their way north. A short time later he was driven and stopped to pick up a third man. One of the men whom Scarborough declared was Coggeshall, struck Professor Wright over the head with an automobile spring. McClelland dragged the body out of the automobile, shot Coggeshall twice, and delivered several other blows on the unconscious man. The three youths then fled in the car owned by Professor Wright and later were captured near Athens.

Prior to the delivery of arguments by counsel for the state and defense, the outstanding developments of the trial were the unexpected appearance of the witness, Coggeshall, who made statements, not under oath, concerning their movements on the day of the crime, and for several days before and after the crime was committed. Their testimony claiming an absolute alibi came as a sensational climax to a trial which has stirred the whole state.

Another interesting feature was the appearance of George Remus, Cincinnati millionaire bootleg king, who engaged in some good-natured banter with the state and defense attorneys, which provided a light relief for the sordid drama enacted here in the courtroom. In the last few hours, Remus' testimony was in connection with a conversation he declared he held with Scarborough in the Athens jail, in which he said Scarborough told him he would be taken care of if he stayed in the county jail.

TWO MEN KILLED BY LUMBER TRUCK

Rockmart, Ga., May 6.—(Special.) W. S. Elders and a man companion named Harrell, young sawmill men from Harrison county, were killed just outside the city limits of Rockmart this afternoon when their truck, loaded with heavy bridge timbers, turned completely over, pinning them under the entire load, the lumber having been securely fastened to the truck with heavy chains.

The accident was caused by the truck striking a heavy two-horse wagon which caused it to turn turtle. The men were extricated by persons who rushed to their aid, but neither regained consciousness, both dying in a nearby farm house where they were removed.

The wreck took place on the Rockmart-Dallas highway, one of the best stretches of road in north Georgia.

The men had been hauling lumber to Rockmart, but very little is known of them here.

The bodies are being held here pending arrival of relatives. No inquest was held.

Coin Purchasers Will Be Honored By Drive Leaders

Business firms and other organizations over the country giving 100 per cent cooperation in the purchase of Confederate Memorial half-dollars will be rewarded by having their names placed in a carved vault in the very breast of the mountain. This information was issued through the memorial association to the campaign workers at the Grant building Wednesday night.

The names are to be written in a big book, placed in a carved vault, and locked within handsome engraved brass doors. These doors are to be thrown open to public inspection of books upon request of the Stone Mountain Memorial hall custodian, according to plans brought to the attention of the coin campaign managers in Atlanta last night.

From the Chesapeake to the Rio Grande the enlistment of these 100 per cent groups will be sought by campaign workers in the distribution of memorial half-dollars. Every firm, men's club, women's club, boys' club, whose employees, force or membership subscribes 100 per cent will be inscribed on the honor book and thus placed for admiration down through the ages.

May Halt Coinage.

Considerable encouragement was manifested Wednesday at local headquarters in the announcement by United States Senator Walter F. George that because of the fear of counterfeiting special coins so easily without detection the present Confederate Memorial half-dollar may be the last.

The treasury department frowns upon such special coinage and congress may end further special coinage as they have ended other special privileges.

Senator George, in speaking of the Confederate Memorial half-dollar, also praised several members of the republican party because of their cordial sympathy and support in so honoring the valor of the southern soldier. He was especially commendable in his reference to Senator Smoot, of Utah, chairman of the finance committee and who introduced the coinage bill, as well as Senator Curtis, leader of the republican party. President Coolidge, according to the junior senator of Georgia, was also heartily in accord with the Confederate Memorial half-dollar.

Peer of Daredevil Fliers To Thrill in Flying Circus

champion air acrobat who will take part in The Constitution's Flying Circus at Decatur Saturday, Sunday and Monday.

Aaron F. Krantz, known better as Diavolo, champion of all acrobats of the air and the star of The Constitution's Flying Circus, will be staged in Decatur, Saturday, Sunday and Monday, at 4:30 o'clock.

Diavolo, who has evolved a curious philosophy. "I know I face death constantly," he says, speaking slowly, carefully. "I know the danger. But I have had enough of monotonous existence. Years I have spent have seemed as decades, dull routine, unending monotony. Now, in danger I find pleasure. In the minutes in the air I breathe the deep of life. These minutes to me are years."

Plane Change Is Thrill. "Take, for example, the change from one airplane to another. There is the roar of the motor in my ears. Above it rises the whine of the wind rushing through the bracing wires. Beneath my feet, as I stand on the top wing, I can feel the lift and tilt of the delicate 'ship' obeying each caprice of the wind. With my body braced against the rushing wind, I stand and wait, nerves a-tingle, blood rushing."

Then from overhead comes the drone of the motor in the other airplane. Gradually it grows louder. My eyes are fastened on the slender ladder dangling beneath it, etched against the sky. I strain toward it and I must hold myself back. "Now the airplane sweeps downward. My muscles tense for the spring—one second more—now—leap and grasp that swinging ladder—grip it tightly—one gasp—half hanging—then up the wobbling rungs—below me the crowd, men and women like ink spots scattered against the green earth—above me the pilot, with worry for my safety erased from his face—to one side, slipping downward, the airplane on which a second before I had stood. "That is life, pleasure, a thrill. I wouldn't trade it for all the insurance in the world against death. I know that there will be a 'some day' for me, a 'some day' when my fingers slip or my judgment is wrong, but when it comes, I'll be ready. I've had my share of Diavolo is tall, slender of body but with shoulders that spread in contrast like the spars of an old sailing ship. Might muscles ripple along his arms; deep-set in his tanned face are light blue, sparkling eyes. The change from one airplane to another will be staged as the feature of the Sunday exhibition.

Diavolo will stand on the tip of the wing of one airplane flying overhead. This is considered one of the most dangerous of all airplane feats.

On Saturday, Diavolo will do his famous "clamber and climb." He will stand on his head on the top wing, will hang from the landing gear with one hand, will "ride horseback" on the fuselage, and will swing and climb to virtually every point on the airplane on which he can find a grip for his fingers. Then, in the feature event, he will stand erect on the top wing, arms outstretched, while the airplane loops the loop. Centrifugal force will hold him to the wing, but should the motor stop for a second and the airplane halt in its loop, he probably would be dropped to the ground and certain death.

All Pilots Take Part. All of the pilots will participate in an exhibition of stunt flying every day. Saturday, "Big Jack" Ashcraft will demonstrate his "dead-stick" landing, bringing the airplane safely to the ground from 1,000 feet altitude without the use of the motor.

On Sunday, Pilot Pangborn will show how to fly an airplane upside-down. He is the first pilot ever to fly his "ship" in this inverted position. After a few seconds, the motor is "killed" by oil fouling the spark plugs but Pangborn will coast onward with the airplane upside-down until he swings it upright in time to make a safe landing.

On Monday, Diavolo will do the breakaway, dropping from the landing gear of the airplane with a 30-foot rope fastened to his legs, and swinging head downward, dangling from this rope, while the airplane circles the field.

Each exhibition will be staged at 2:30 p. m., unless unusually bad winds force delay of a short time. No admission will be charged to Tuggle field, which is located half a mile to the left of the Stone Mountain road, just beyond the Decatur depot.

Peel, president of the Southwest Georgia club; Judge Price Gilbert, Judge George Bell, Judge Roscoe Luke, Colonel John T. Boisselle, Hon. Hal M. Stanley, Fred House, Hunter Bell, W. B. Harrison, F. A. Hooper, Lloyd Parks, E. L. Rainey, W. W. Orr, George W. Forrester, Wade C. Davis, Lynn Fort, Smith Tackett, Ward Wright, H. H. Turner, Sam Turner, Guyton Parks, Judge Arthur Powell, Judge G. H. Moody, Mark Bolding, Dr. W. N. Edenfield, Edgar Oliver, H. B. Fitzgerald and many others.

The entertainment committee has planned for music and dancing, and some special stunts such as a fat man's race, sack races, and other features will also be on the program to enliven the occasion.

Particular stress is laid by the committee on the importance of every one being on hand at the pavilion at 12 o'clock to catch well-filled baskets. In order that all the eligibles may be sure to be notified it is announced that all Atlantans who hail from that section of the state bounded by a line drawn from Columbus to Macon and thence south to the Florida border are invited. This district includes the towns of Macon, Columbus, Albany, Americus, Ft. Valley, Fitzgerald, Moultrie, Ashburn, Bainbridge, Thomasville, Dawson, Camilla, Hawkinsville, Perry, Tifton, Quitman, and "all way stations." The only stipulation is to bring well-filled baskets and be on hand at 12 o'clock when the fun starts.

The Coca-Cola company of Atlanta has volunteered to furnish drinks free of charge to the picnicers.

ASK FARE REVISION ON MARIETTA LINE

Petition for revision in passenger fares between Atlanta and Marietta was filed late Wednesday afternoon with the Georgia Public Service commission by the Atlanta Northern railway, operators of the Atlanta-Marietta interurban trolley line. The petition will be heard Wednesday morning, May 20, at 10 o'clock.

Filing of the petition, it is said, is in accord with an understanding reached between officials of the Atlanta Northern and a committee of its patrons to the effect that the company would seek an increase in its fares so that it might earn a fair return on the value of its property used in furnishing the public service.

The petition seeks to adjust rates between Atlanta and Marietta and intermediate points on the basis of a seven-cent zone, instead of six-cent zone rate as at present, with the purpose in view of producing a net annual earning of $64,000 for the company. It was agreed upon between officials of the company and a committee of its patrons as being a fair earning upon the value of the property employed and the cost of the service. The seven-cent zone rate, the petition sets out, is a compromise rate fixed tentatively by agreement between the company and its patrons with the understanding that if, after six months trial, it should fail to produce earnings at the rate of $64,000 a year it would be subject to further revision by the public service commission so as to earn that sum.

The average rate of increase would be slightly less than fifteen hundredths (15-100) of a cent per mile as applied to the 54-ticket, commutation books in general use by the regular patrons of the line, if the schedule in the petition is adopted.

The cost of 54-ticket books, for use within 35 days from date of sale, would be changed, if the commission grants the petition, as follows:

To Atlanta from Hills Park, $3.24 to $3.78; from Bolton, $3.60 to $4.32; from Gilmore, $4.50 to $5.76; Smyrna, $5 to $7.20; Fair Oaks, $7.20 to $8.54; Marietta, $8.40 to $10.

The cost of 40-ticket books, good for 90 days, would be:

To Atlanta from Hills Park, $3.42 to $4.10; Bolton, $3.16 to $3.19; Gilmore, $6.90 to $8.28; Smyrna, $8.58 to $10.30; Fair Oaks, $10.32 to $12.38; Marietta, $12 to $14.40.

SUCCESS OF MUSIC CLINIC TEST SHOWN

Mrs. Norman Sharp, president of the Woman's club, welcomed applicants and their friends on behalf of the club and spoke of the pleasure the organization felt in being able to join in giving this opportunity to Atlanta's children during National Music week.

Some of the applicants reached the club sometime before 5 o'clock, the hour scheduled for the tests to begin, and Mrs. Sharp took them for an inspection tour of the club, showing them the magnificent auditorium, main dining room and other interesting points.

These free musical clinics will continue through this week, 30 children being selected to take the tests each day out of the hundreds who apply. The selection of the fortunate 30 is made each day by Mr. Codrington, from indications as to their natural musical talent displayed in their handwriting. Each child wishing to take the test must fill out the application blank published herewith and send it, accompanied by a line or two in their handwriting in ink, to "Musical Clinic Editor, care The Constitution." The names of 30 who have been selected for the Friday clinic will be published on Friday morning and on Saturday 60 names will be published. A double clinic is to be held that day in order to accommodate as many as possible.

These clinics are not intended to pass upon any acquired musical ability, but are to show whether or not the child has natural, inborn musical talent. Thus, it makes no difference whether an applicant has ever taken music lessons. Tests will simply show to what degree they have been blessed with the divine gift of musical talent.

Children between the ages of 10 and 18 are eligible for the tests. The 30 selected for this afternoon's clinic who will present themselves at the Woman's club, on Peachtree street, at 5 o'clock, follow:

CUPID VAULTS WALLS OF PRISON

Snook's office by Justice of the Peace A. A. Owen, of Atlanta. Only the principals and a few witnesses were present. It was said that Warden Snook was occupied at a meeting of the parole board and did not attend.

Mrs. Day's maiden name is said to have been Miss June Travers, of Cleveland. She married and became Mrs. Allread, but later was divorced. Her stage name is said to have been Ailene Astor, according to reports of Atlanta friends. Mrs. Day established a wide reputation as a stage star in New York and other eastern and middle western states. She came to Atlanta last summer to be near Day.

Black, as he is known on the reservation, is a cook. This job having been assigned him when he became a prisoner. He has served something over a year of his sentence, according to reports. He is reputed to be quite wealthy.

Efforts to locate Mrs. Day or to communicate with the groom were futile Wednesday night. He can not go to his young bride for another three years unless part of sentence is commuted.

His bride, however, will await his coming when the prison gates swing wide.

Rawls New Treasurer.
The election of J. F. Rawls, of Suffolk, Va., as treasurer of the board, fills a vacancy caused by the death of J. D. Hamilton, of Nashville, Mr. Rawls succeeding W. M. Cassety, Nashville, acting treasurer.

Mrs. Ina Davis Fulton, of Sherman, Texas, was elected to succeed Mrs. F. H. E. Ross, Nashville, resigned, treasurer of the woman's department of the board, effective July 1.

The board set December 10 as the date for a special meeting, when budget appropriations tentatively agreed upon today, contingent upon the response from the church-wide appeal for missions, will be allotted to the respective fields of mission work. This decision, it was declared, would likely bring to Nashville the winter meeting of the college of bishops, all of whom are members of the board of missions.

Will Appeal for $750,000.
The tentative budget carries a church-wide appeal of $750,000 for missions, and of this amount $510,000 is the minimum sum required to complete the $1,400,000 budget.

The suggestion of the estimate committee as to the basis of appropriations provides a total of $1,015,115.04 for foreign mission work and $329,831.57 for the department of home missions. The estimates made by the administrative secretaries of the woman's

ORDER PROBE OF CHARGE OF GRAIN SPECULATION

Chicago, May 6.—The Chicago Board of Trade has authorized an inquiry by a special committee into published statements attributed to George E. Marcy, chairman, and E. F. Rosenbaum, member of the board of managers of the grain marketing company, it was disclosed today.

In a statement issued in Washington and published in last Sunday's newspapers, Mr. Marcy declared that the depression in grain prices last fall and winter was caused by the huge holdings of speculators and that, but for the artificial technical condition developed through speculative manipulations, conditions had warranted a high price level for all grain this year.

Statements published yesterday and attributed to Mr. Rosenbaum were to the effect that there was manipulation in May 1924 and corn transactions. Mr. Rosenbaum was out of the city when the statement was published and confirmation of it could not be obtained from his office.

"What is your objection to recommending that man's appointment? Have you anything against him?" "Certainly not," answered Senator Sorghum. "I regard him so highly that I hate to run the risk of revealing to him that I haven't any real influence worth mentioning."—Washington Star.

Today Is 10th Anniversary Of Sinking of Lusitania

BY ROBERT D. LUSK.

New York, May 6.—Ten years ago Thursday, a torpedo from the U-20 sank the Lusitania.

A horde of world-revolutionizing events have thundered through the years since May 7, 1915. To the majority of persons, the anniversary of the tragedy recalls a hazy remembrance of screaming headlines, of partial, then completed, lists of 785 men, women and children dead of the 1,257 passengers aboard.

To the historian, the date marked the beginning of the end for Germany. With the sinking of the ship and the loss of more than 100 Americans, the attitude of the United States toward the European war was changed. Her entrance less than two years later may be traced to this first great ruthless U-boat activity.

But the intervening years have only served to impress more vividly on the minds of the handful of survivors the tragic nightmare of hopelessness human destruction. It has been a haunting memory from which they can never completely remove themselves.

The dull explosion, the confusion that followed, the struggling mass of humans deposited helpless in the water, has become a part of the life of Charles W. Bowring, one of those who was saved from the disaster.

Wherever he goes, he must carry the vivid memory of the tragic May afternoon. He has recounted it hundreds of times. He is still, after 10 years, called upon by relatives or friends to answer inquiries about their loved ones.

Sitting in his shipping office overlooking the North river through which the Lusitania sailed for the last time May 1, 1915, Bowring's hands shook as he reread the letter which he dispatched to his wife describing to her his provident rescue from the doomed vessel.

"We were sitting at lunch at 2:10 when a violent shock occurred. Everyone jumped up and started for the deck. There was no pushing nor crowding. One of my most vivid impressions is the splendid behavior of the crew and the passengers.

"The ship immediately began to list to the starboard. I picked up lifebelts on my way out. There was an enormous crowd on the deck, but there was no jostling. I gave the belts to some women. A boat full of passengers was being lowered. In the rush to get it down, the stern was lowered too quickly and she swung into the water with the bow still in the air, spilling women and children into the water.

"I went below for more life preservers and found five. When I again reached the deck, the water was ready on the starboard side and there were but a couple of people there. I gave away two of the belts and strapped one around me and dove into the calm sea.

"The ship was sinking and I swam like mad to get clear of the funnels and davits which nearly carried me under."

Towing then recounted the struggle to find wreckage sufficiently buoyant, of cruising about on a raft for hours, picking up survivors and caring for women and children suffering from the shock and exposure. It was fully four hours, he recalled, before relief came from Queenstown and nearly midnight before port was reached.

As to the heroism displayed in the face of death, Bowring told again of Alfred G. Vanderbilt, who gave a life preserver to a woman. Bowring saw him, shortly before the plunge, standing quietly in a passageway. He was drowned and his body never recovered. Charles Frohman, standing with a little group, was heard to say: "Why fear death? It is the most beautiful adventure that life gives."

As the ship sank, 18 minutes after the torpedo struck, there was no outcry, he said, but only "a long, lingering moan."

In his diary, discovered a few years later, Lieutenant Captain Schwieger, commander of the U-20, wrote: "It seems an enormous crowd on the deck will be afloat only a short time. Submerge to 24 metres and go to sea. I could not have fired a second torpedo in the face of such humanity, attempting to save themselves."

Use of Liquor Cars To Get Rum-Runners May Be Inaugurated

Secretary of the Treasury Mellon has asked Governor Walker if Georgia will provide free license tags for automobiles used by law enforcement officers of the federal government in running down rum runners, according to a letter received Wednesday.

Secretary Mellon states that the federal government purposes to turn over a large number of automobiles, seized from whisky carriers, to marshals to be used in capturing rum runners. He states that they wish to equip each car with the customary state license tag in order that there shall be nothing to distinguish it from the ordinary automobile in appearance. Governor Walker turned the letter over to Secretary of State S. Guyt McLendon, whose department has charge of the sale of automobile license tags. Secretary McLendon had not replied on Wednesday, but said he would do so Thursday morning.

It was pointed out at the capitol, however, that a recent decision of the supreme court had held that the automobile license fees are not taxes in the regular sense of the word, but toll for the use of state roads. This decision held that autos owned by municipalities and counties would have to pay the license and it was believed that the same ruling would apply to the federal government.

CREDIT MEN ELECT NEW OFFICIAL SLATE

Election of officers and discussion of important business of the association will feature a meeting at 6:30 o'clock Tuesday night, May 12, of the Atlanta association of Credit Men, to be held at the Elks' club.

B. F. Ramey, of the Texas company, will preside.

Theatrical Man Jailed.

Wichita, Kan., May 6.—A 10-day jail sentence for contempt was imposed in district court yesterday on J. H. Cooper, former theater owner, for a fight at the Sam B. Amidon, attorney and democratic national committeeman from Kansas.

MAYOR PROCLAIMS 'BETTER HOMES' WEEK

Final touches are being added this week to the three homes included in Atlanta's part of national "better homes" week, and with the proclamation of Mayor Walter A. Sims, designating the week of May 10-17 as "better homes" week in Atlanta, leaders are enthusiastic over prospects of winning top prize in the nation-wide contest.

Mayor Sims calls upon all Atlantans to enter into the spirit of the week and urges all citizens to visit the three homes entered in the contest. House No. 1, built by Minter Homes company, on a lot of Professor J. H. Smith, from plans of the Architects' Retiree Association, is practically complete and is supplied with furniture furnished by furniture dealers of the city. The house is a two-story affair, with a high school girls' silver and toilet articles and draperies are in keeping with the cost of the home. Leonora Lyon is chairman of the furnishing.

House No. 2, the apartment for the Americanization demonstration, was loaned by Mrs. G. L. Wentworth and shows the feasibility of converting a house into a two-family apartment. It is being furnished on a suitable budget. Some rare old furnishings from abroad will be used in this apartment.

House No. 3 is in the hands of the negro committee and will be completed this week. It is being built by W. C. Curren, an industrial engineer, by Thornton Mayre, of a four-room house of the Architects' Small House Service bureau.

All houses are thoroughly equipped. Mrs. Edwin H. Smith, chairman of equipment, having in each case supplied such fixtures as are suitable to the character of the house. Grounds have been planted with trees and flower boxes furnished by Atlanta florists and horticulturists. From books and music by good firms and shows the feasibility of converting a house into a two-family apartment.

EVOLUTION DEBATE PLANNED IN MEMPHIS

Memphis, Tenn., May 6.—The question of value or not the theory of evolution is in conflict with the Bible and Christian teachings will be debated here probably on May 11 by Dean I. H. Noel of St. Mary's Episcopal church of the city, and Rev. W. B. Riley of Minneapolis, executive secretary of the Christian Fundamentalists association. Rev. Riley issued a challenge to Dean Noel, who was accepted in a telegram the dean sent from St. Louis, Mo., where he went yesterday on business.

The challenge was issued after Dean Noel was quoted as having stated in his sermon Sunday that the theory of evolution was not repugnant to the Bible and Christian teachings. Rev. He suggested that the debate be held in the city auditorium next Monday but the date and place have not yet been set definitely.

New York Mayoralty Race May Stir Up National Political Complications by Bitter Fight

Democrats Watch Situation Closely; Result May Have Bearing on Next National Convention.

BY RAYMOND CLAPPER.

Washington, May 6.—National political complications are likely to arise out of the bitter fight which is impending over the New York mayoralty race.

Forecasting an apparent attempt by political enemies to sidetrack him, Mayor Hylan has just announced his candidate for a third term. This was a direct challenge to Governor Al Smith, who is understood to have opposed the mayor's renomination by New York democrats. Smith's opposition is the sequel to the dramatic fight at the Syracuse state democratic convention in 1922 when he defeated the Hylan-Hearst forces and won the nomination for governor.

Hearst has advised Hylan to run as an independent in the Tammany organization refuses to renominate him. This would lead to such a serious split in the New York democratic organization that Hylan believes his present aggressive course in declaring himself will whip the opposition into line. This situation looks into national politics in this way: Smith is expected to be the New York democratic nominee for the senate next year. As Wadsworth is being groomed for the republican presidential nomination in 1928 or four years thereafter, the New York republican organization will make a terrific effort to reelect him over Smith and will have considerable outside republican assistance in this enterprise.

Democratic Support. To meet this offensive, Smith will need the solid democratic organization behind him. As the greatest portion of the democratic vote is in New York city his friends do not want him to aggravate the Hylan forces to the point where they might knife him in his senatorial fight next year.

The same argument was used in trying to induce Smith to drop his fight on the Hearst-Hylan ticket at the Syracuse convention, but he refused to compromise and won out in the end.

All democrats are watching the New York situation closely because of the effect it will have not only on the vital senatorial fight next year, but because the outcome of the two struggles will have a tremendous bearing on the action of the next democratic national convention.

Peace Efforts Fail. When Smith was reelected last November in face of a national and local republican landslide, his friends instantly proclaimed him as the logical presidential nominee in 1928. This riled McAdoo democrats. All of the efforts to stage harmony dinners and wipe out the differences have failed.

Many believe that the democratic situation is heading toward another deadlock between the Smith and McAdoo organizations like that witnessed at Madison Square Garden last summer. The only thing that will avert it, some democrats believe, is the elimination of one or the other before 1928. Smith's failure to make the senate probably would eliminate him. McAdoo is out of the public eye now and has been in rather uncertain health, so that some believe he will eliminate himself. Nevertheless his old organization still retains the zeal which it manifested a year ago and is carrying on a campaign of education insisting that the south and west must unite to defeat the east and keep the party progressive.

GRANT URGES SANCTION OF NICKEL PLATE UNION

Washington, May 6.—An endorsement of the Nickel Plate railroad merger project, coupled with high praise for O. P. and M. J. Van Swearingen, the individuals most active in its promotion was stressed before the interstate commerce commission hearings today by Richard F. Grant, president of the United States Chamber of Commerce.

National policy has recognized the possibility of improving and cheapening railroad service through consolidation of major railroads into efficient, competing systems, he said, but realization of the benefits has had to await the emergence of men of rare ability both in finance and management.

The Van Swearingens, by undertaking the project of putting the Nickel Plate, Chesapeake and Ohio, Pere Marquette, Hocking Valley and Erie railroads into a single system for operation and management, he asserted, have shown themselves to be men of the requisite caliber.

Although testifying as an individual, Mr. Grant introduced records of the chamber which showed that industrial and trade bodies composing it had voted several times in favor of the general principle of railroad consolidation.

The commission, he thought should let the Van Swearingens "blaze the way" for general consolidation, rather than hold up definite and satisfactory progress such as he felt had been made in a single territory by the Van Swearingens until all the railroads in the country had been included in consolidation plans.

On cross-examination, Mr. Grant told counsel for dissenting minority stockholders of some of the roads affected, that his own chief personal business interest was with the M. A. Hanna company, of which H. M. Hanna was a director. The latter, he said, was a director of the Chesapeake and Ohio friendly to the Van Swearingen project. He declared he was viewing the consolidation as a public matter, without passing particular judgment as to the equity in the various exchanges and replacement of stock ownership between the five corporations and their stockholders. He "presumed the warm and mellow hand of providence that looks after widows and orphans would take care of the minorities."

In the testimony of J. J. Berner, president of the Nickel Plate system, and W. C. Hull, assistant to the traffic vice president of the Chesapeake and Ohio, the operating aspects of the merger proposal were more definitely dealt with. Mr. Berner, who had previously undergone cross-examination for four days, gave his reasons for estimating that $1,131,000 a year in accounting expense would be saved by the unification as compared with the present expenditure of the five separate railroads, and explained the preparations the Nickel Plate system had made by purchase and enlargement of terminals and division point facilities for the merger.

Mr. Hull, representing the Chesapeake and Ohio management, said that by the consolidation, the railroad he represented would relieve congestion now encountered in moving coal to the west, particularly at Cincinnati. The Erie lines west of Marion, Ohio, could take over the present surplus, he said, and the Chesapeake and Ohio western lines could be used for its lighter general traffic. The traffic problem on his railroad in times of stress, he insisted, lay in the difficulty of getting its coal trains taken off its lines, and the strong and extensive connections proposed for it in the merger would meet this.

H. W. Anderson, counsel for a group of Chesapeake and Ohio stockholders attacking the merger, will be given opportunity to cross-examine Mr. Hull tomorrow.

MOTOR CLUB OFFICIAL SPEAKS ON GOOD ROADS

A. P. Phillips, Jr., manager of the Atlanta Motor club, addressed the Atlanta Builders' exchange, Wednesday night at the Henry Grady hotel on the question of good road work by motor clubs and the urgent necessity for the utmost degree of co-operation between clubs, road officials and builders.

"The development and construction of roads," he said, "is vitally linked with the development of community values apart from the golden harvest that follows in the wake of tourist travel where road conditions put the community in a position to benefit from the tremendous growth of motor touring in America."

One of the points stressed by Mr. Phillips is the close relationship between good roads and the farm. He produced figures to show that farms of the United States are annually losing a quarter of a billion dollars because of lack of good roads leading to markets.

"It is a matter of common observation," he said, "that where any community passes from a condition dominated by bad roads to one characterized by good roads, land values in that community advance. You find no abandoned farms on good roads."

He rapped the "growing tendency to divert motor vehicle taxation from road construction and maintenance to which, according to the policy of the American Automobile association, and the motor club, these funds properly and wholly applied."

ARKANSAS PLANS TO SAVE "CONSTITUTION"

First Airplane Goes to England, Wright Declares

Dayton, Ohio, May 6.—Despite the possibility of a congressional investigation of his charges against the Smithsonian institution, and the efforts of a dozen cities and half a hundred museums to obtain the original Wright flying machine, it will go to England, Orville Wright said tonight.

Mr. Wright tonight asserted that the machine would be shipped to Science Museum, South Kensington, London, within two months. It was pointed out that persons interested in the movement to keep the machine in this country hoped that he would delay action until a resolution could be introduced in congress providing for an investigation, but Mr. Wright said that his word was pledged and would be kept.

"The decision is unalterable, even if I wanted to change it," he declared. "I have pledged my word and will keep it."

TERRIFIC EARTH SHOCKS RECORDED AT OBSERVATORY

Ottawa, Ont., May 6.—A terrific earthquake, believed to have occurred somewhere at sea, was indicated in two series of tremors, recorded last night and this morning at the Dominion observatory.

Observatory officials have been unable to determine the distance to the center, but they believe that if the earthquake occurred in an inhabited part of the globe, the damage was as great as that experienced at Tokyo. The first tremor was recorded at 7:42 o'clock last night and the shocks lasted for two and a half hours. The second quake was registered at 4:05 o'clock this morning.

The program, comprising a new departure for organized labor in America, was adopted unanimously by the meeting after more than two hours discussion. Movies, radio, public meetings and every form of modern instruction will be utilized with the purpose of educating the individual worker to the economic value of joining organized labor.

BURGLARS GET DOPE IN DRUG STORE RAID

Federal Officers To Continue Hunt Of John D. Walker

Macon, Ga., May 6.—Federal officers reported today that efforts would be renewed to locate the whereabouts of John D. Walker, former Sparta, Ga., banker, who was yesterday indicted on three counts by a federal grand jury involving violations of the national banking act. It was stated at the United States marshal's office here that the whereabouts of Walker was unknown and that the government had not received any trace of him in some time.

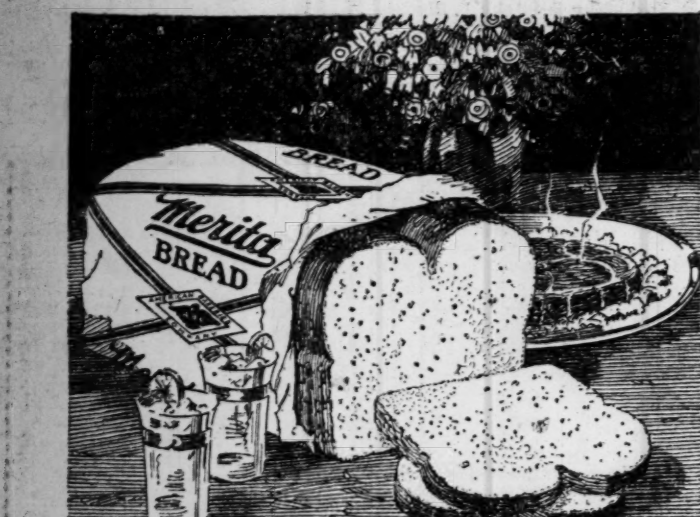

One of the indictments charges Walker with contriving to get in possession and control of $7,000 5 percent bonds of the city of Sparta while he was president of the First National bank there. Another count alleges that he obtained a loan on the bonds and this loan was never received by the bank. The other indictment charges that he defrauded the National Banking association out of amounts totaling $7,000.

Walker is well known in Georgia banking circles, having been president of a chain of banks in this state at one time.

Teacher in Tennessee Arrested Upon Charge Of Teaching Evolution

Nashville, Tenn., May 6.—A special from Dayton, Tenn., says that Professor J. T. Scopes of the science department, Rhea County High School, was arrested by a deputy sheriff, charged with violating the Tennessee law prohibiting the teaching of evolution in the state public schools. Preliminary hearing will be held Saturday. It is stated the defense will attack the constitutionality of the new law.

CIVIL LIBERTIES UNION WILL APPROVE CASE.

New York, May 6.—The American Civil Liberties union, from its headquarters today announced that since it anticipated a conviction in the trial of J. T. Scopes, teacher of Dayton, Tenn., charged with violation of the state law forbidding the teaching of evolution in public schools, it was making arrangements to carry the case, if necessary, to the United States supreme court.

COUNTY WILL GIVE $5,000 TO AIR FIELD

Fulton commissioners Wednesday ratified the proposal of the public works committee of that body to go on a fifty-fifty basis with the city in grading Candler field as a site for an aviation field for Atlanta. The board also voted to favor the acquisition of a nurse to aid doctors in follow-up work among county school children and transacted other routine business before adjourning to meet again at 2:30 o'clock Friday afternoon.

The question of the return of the land to enforce discipline among prisoners at Fulton county convict camps did not come up for consideration. It is expected, however, that it will be considered when the adjourned meeting is held Friday. The grand jury last Friday recommended reinstatement of the lath.

City council, acting in accordance with the agreement of the public works committee, already has voted $5,000 to the grading of Candler field, and it was said unofficially Wednesday that the commissioners would vote to give $5,000 at the meeting Friday to match the $5,000 of the city.

Louis Marquardt headed a delegation from Atlanta labor organizations, which protested the use of foreign labor in the construction of the new Fulton county high school instead of using Atlanta labor in construction of the building. A resolution calling the attention of the board of education and Jerry Wells, superintendent of schools, to the matter was passed.

Mrs. J. N. Bawner, president of the Fulton County Parent-Teacher association council, headed the delegation which asked the commission to take under advisement the proposition of the employment of a nurse to follow up the work of doctors among school children. Commissioners voted to leave the matter in the hands of Mr. Moore, who also is chairman of public health committee, and gave him power to act.

Harding was named to confer with Mayor Sims regarding appointment of a committee to stage a campaign to raise $100,000 for the new buildings.

WOMAN AWARDED $50,000 FOR DEATH OF HER HUSBAND

New Orleans, May 6.—Mrs. L. E. Williams was awarded $50,000 damages in federal district court here late today against the Great Southern Lumber company, of Bogalusa, La., and five individuals for the death of her husband, who was killed during labor trouble there in 1919.

The jury gave her $40,000 for herself and $10,000 as the guardian of her minor sons. The defendant, in addition to the company are J. B. Lindsey, Harold H. Wilcox, Louis Levert and David Reim, of Bogalusa, and Colonel Louis F. Guerre, of New Orleans, a former official of the company. Their counsel indicated that an appeal would be filed. The verdict makes the defendants responsible individually and collectively for the damages.

Mrs. Williams' suit charged that the company and the other defendants were responsible for the death of her husband who lost his life in fighting when two other men were killed and two wounded in efforts of a posse to arrest Sol J. Dicus, a negro labor leader, charged with disturbing the peace on November 21, 1919. Williams, who operated a garage, was president of the Bogalusa trades council. Dicus sued for $100,000 recently but lost his case.

Always give your car the same gasoline

THERE is more than one good brand of gas, but also there is gasoline on sale that is not good enough for your car. In fact, the last government test showed that 52 per cent of the samples failed to pass the federal requirements.

The wise plan is to settle on a satisfactory gasoline, get your carburetor adjusted to it and then stay with it, taking no chances of upsetting your engine's digestion with a change of diet.

You will find not only that Pan-Am Gasoline is of the highest grade, but that it is always the same, whenever and wherever you get it.

It is a straight-run product—it has not been blended with by-products to lower its boiling point. It has a low initial boiling point, thus insuring easy, quick starting (reducing the use of the choke), and this in turn means that less gasoline will get into the crank-case to dilute your oil.

As Pan-Am Gasoline has an even range of distillation, the explosions are uniform; the power even and steady.

There is no better gasoline than Pan-Am. Its regular use is a wise habit. It is sold at convenient locations by our own service stations and by carefully selected dealers.

To Spend Millions This Year To Extend The Service

THE telephone construction programme outlined for this year is the largest ever undertaken by this company. It calls for new and additional plant costing more than $10,921,000.

This new money must be secured from people who are willing to invest their money in the telephone business in this section, and who have confidence in our ability to engineer, construct, manage and operate the entire investment so efficiently that it will earn a return for them.

The large, additional investment is but a reflection of the demand for service in this and other Southern States. The new plant is necessary to meet the service needs of present and prospective subscribers, whose business and social activities require adequate, efficient, comprehensive service.

After all, the telephone system is merely the joint trustee for those who own the property and those who subscribe for the service. In no other industry are there as many owners as in the Bell System. There are approximately 750,000 security owners and more women than men stockholders.

To safeguard the holdings of the investors on one hand, and to extend and operate the property so efficiently and economically as to fully meet the needs of the public, on the other hand, is the serious responsibility of the telephone management.

The enormous sums of new money constantly required have greatly increased the investment per telephone, making it necessary to earn greater revenue per telephone, in order to meet the growing cost of producing service and leave a reasonable balance for profit.

Our efforts to keep pace with the growth and progress of this State and to measure up fully to our serious responsibility are aided in no small measure by your friendly encouragement.

Pills and patent nostrums sell by the billions ...get the one really marvelous health and beauty prescription is simply PURE WATER

WE Americans spend millions for medicine—patent and otherwise. Yet the finest of all health and beauty prescriptions—pure water—seems little understood.

Medical authorities urge that office workers particularly, because of their long hours at a desk, should drink 2 to 3 times more water than they now do—but only between meals. No water should be taken while eating because it interferes with proper insalivation of food.

The safe way to drink

First, please understand that mistakes in cooling water can over-shadow all its benefits. Drinking water in the average office is often cooled in the old-fashioned water jar where the porter "manhandles" the ice which must float in the water all day. This is dangerous, contagious diseases can be transmitted.

Now thanks to a clever invention, this unsanitary method can be eliminated. By the ingenious device of inserting an inverted bottle of pure water snugly in the neck of a stout stone crock, the "XXth Century" Cooler prevents ice from touching the water it cools. The ice is merely packed about the stone crock inside the seamless, vacuum like body of the cooler. No corroding metal or "handled" ice can touch water cooled by this method.

A new delight—"aerated water"

When first you draw a drink from this "XXth Century" Cooler you will be surprised to see gigantic bubbles shoot up and break with a foaming splash against the top of the glass bottle.

This aerating principle, due to the vacuum made by the inverted bottle, constantly enlivens and freshens the water with every punch of the faucet, giving it the cool deliciousness of water dipped from a foaming mountain waterfall.

How to drink for health

According to the best European and American authorities, the average man or woman should drink at least 2 quarts of water per day, that is 8 to 10 glasses between meals.

To keep thin or reduce weight, 6 to 8 glasses should be taken between each meal—and should be accompanied by at least one hour of vigorous exercise. Only so can the waste issue be carried off before it has a chance to settle in "spots." The mistaken idea that water is fattening has been the making of many a fat man.

Avoiding brain fog. 4 to 5 glasses of water taken between 3 and 4 in the afternoon, when brain fog due to fatigue poisons in the blood usually appears, will greatly freshen the bodily system and stimulate mental keenness.

News for smokers. Free water drinking immediately after smoking hastens the elimination of the drug (nicotine) and aids liver work and general oxidation.

Preventing constipation. It is estimated by authorities that constipation afflicts three-fourths of all Americans. Indoor workers are particularly susceptible.

To prevent constipation take 2 glasses of cold water on rising, 6 to 8 glasses between breakfast and lunch and the same between lunch and dinner. Also one large glass before retiring.

An aid to the complexion. A clear complexion depends upon an active skin and a good blood supply. The free drinking of water is a means of improving the quality of the blood. At the same time drinking large quantities of water causes greatly increased activity of the kidneys, skin and bowels. The man or woman who drinks at least 2 quarts of pure water every day need have no worries about a sallow, blotched complexion.

Note to office managers and factory superintendents. If you seek a high degree of efficiency a lessened number of sick leaves, and a happier force, see that these XXth Century Coolers, the standard of big business, are centrally located in every office or factory unit.

FREE COMMANDER OF LIQUOR CHARGES

Norfolk, Va., May 6.—(By the Associated Press.)—Commander D. W. Fuller, commanding the naval transport Beaufort, was acquitted of all three charges alleging neglect of duty in connection with the finding aboard his ship of 500 quarts of whisky when it docked here in February, by a court-martial at the naval base here today.

The acquittal of Commander Fuller came at the close of a three days' hearing, in which the prosecution contended that it would have been impossible for the whisky to have been placed aboard the Beaufort without the knowledge of the captain if he had taken proper and reasonable precautions. The court-martial deliberated only about ten minutes before "not proven" was written after each of the three specifications against the officer and "not guilty" was added to the general charge.

WILSON COLLEGE PLANS LAUNCHED

Local citizens at Valdosta have already raised $500,000 toward the sum needed to properly finance the memorial college, stated R. C. Mizell, of Valdosta, a member of the temporary board of trustees for the college at the luncheon. Out of this sum a 100-acre tract has been purchased for a campus. The American Federation of Labor has promised to erect one of the buildings and the American Legion has pledged the fullest support of its 11,000 posts scattered all over the United States.

Mr. Mizell pointed out that eventually approximately $10,000,000 will be needed to build the kind of college which will appropriately memorialize the great leader; experts have estimated, however, he said, that the college can be begun with one-fourth of this sum, $2,500,000, on hand.

The time is now considered ripe to appeal to the entire country to take part in the erection of this memorial.

Leaders in Wilson College Drive

to Woodrow Wilson, but, as Mr. Mizell said, it will be impossible to go to the people of the nation and ask their support to such an undertaking unless they can be told that Georgia people have already done their full part toward the project. Therefore, Georgia is to be asked to contribute the first $1,000,000 of the sum needed, and for this purpose a statewide campaign organization has been perfected. It was to signalize the launching of this statewide campaign that the luncheon was held Wednesday.

George Lauds Wilson. Senator Walter F. George, of Vienna, one of the speakers Wednesday, pointed out that Georgia, having undertaken the creation of this college memorial to Wilson, will suffer more if she fails to carry the proposal to completion than by anything that has been done within her borders in all history.

"The name of Wilson is revered all over the world by that splendid class of people who admire and revere the ideals for which he stood," said Senator George, "and the brand which failure in this undertaking would place upon the name of Georgia would work the state incalculable harm."

"Georgia has begun here today," said William A. Simon, commander of Argonne post, No. 1, American Legion, of Atlanta, "what may easily become the greatest undertaking in the state's history. As an American veteran of the world war, I feel it a privilege to be able to address a gathering of Georgians and tell them that Woodrow Wilson was a commander-in-chief unsurpassed in the history of man, for the reverence and admiration he inspired in the heart of every man who served in the armies of which he was the head."

"It was because we knew, from the president's own words," continued Mr. Simon, "that America was in the war for no material gain, either to the nation or to an individual in it, that America fought only for democracy and justice to the weaker nations, that we fought with the cheerfulness we did."

"Politicians may attack the name of Wilson, but it is because he was not a politician, but a statesman, and because the things for which he stood were an ideal to which little minds could not aspire."

Memorial Appropriate. Pleasant A. Stovall, chairman, stated that if Woodrow Wilson had been asked to choose his own memorial, he would have named a college. "I knew Woodrow Wilson, from the days when we went to school together," said Mr. Stovall, "and it is as the educator that I know he would want first of all to be remembered. I do not know how many of you here know it, but at one time Woodrow Wilson was suggested for chancellor of the University of Georgia. He was sound on as to whether or not he would accept the post, which was vacant at the time, he replied that it was a professor at Princeton and must remain there."

Edgar B. Dunlap, vice chairman of the state-wide organization, read a large number of telegrams and letters from prominent men, expressing their hearty sympathy with the movement and voicing their regret that they were unable to attend the luncheon. Among those who had wired were William G. McAdoo, Melville E. Stone, recently retired president of the Associated Press; Herbert Hoover, Governor E. Lee Trinkle, of Virginia; Governor Albert C. Ritchie, of Maryland; Stockton Axson, brother-in-law of Woodrow Wilson, now professor at Rive Institute, Texas; George J. Berry, president of the International Printing Pressmen and Assistants Union of North America; Newton D. Baker, secretary of war in Mr. Wilson's cabinet; Rev. Neal L. Anderson, of Savannah; Cleveland H. Dodge, banker and educator of New York, and others.

Dr. Jones Is Eloquent. Dr. M. Ashby Jones, in one of the most eloquent speeches of the occasion, declared that the big question before Georgians was whether or not they were able to accept the challenge of Woodrow Wilson as a citizen of Georgia. Dr. Jones said that by the monuments which a people erected to honor their great men, by the men they chose thus to hold up to their posterity as great, were the people judged.

"It is a serious and important thing," he said, "to claim the fellow-citizenship as Georgians with such a man as Woodrow Wilson. The honor and the fame which rest around that name do not depend upon any memorials or anything the world or Georgia may do. It is secured to all posterity by the life of the man himself. But in undertaking to erect this great memorial to such a man, Georgia has undertaken a vast responsibility in showing that she is worthy to claim such a man as her citizen."

"Several of the speakers pointed out that there is no men's college between Macon and Gainesville, Fla., and declared that the decision to join the Woodrow Wilson college at Valdosta would prove a blessing to all south Georgia as well as to the entire state. "Statistics show," said Mr. Mizell, "that 85 per cent of a college student body is drawn from within a radius of 100 miles of the college. But it is a startling fact that the establishment of a new college, besides drawing its own students from this area, increases the number of students at other colleges from that same territory."

Black Is Speaker. Eugene R. Black, a member of the state executive committee, welcomed the gathering to Atlanta and voiced the spirit of optimism in the future of the state that is a marked feature of every succeeding speech.

The invocation was pronounced by Rabbi I. E. Marcuson, of Macon. The new college, it is stated, will be governed by a board of trustees chosen nationally from Wilson's intimate associates. Plans for its future direction have been worked out by former members of Wilson's cabinet and others of his personal friends. The new college, it is declared, will be different from any other college in America. Its chief aim will be to build character and inspire young men with ideals similar to those of Woodrow Wilson. It will seek to educate men thoroughly rather than to graduate them. Students will be "hand-taught," through intimate association with their instructors—the preceptorial method of Oxford and Cambridge.

Atlanta Is Praised. Appreciation of the support that Atlanta and north Georgia are giving to the Woodrow Wilson college project was expressed after the luncheon by Allen J. Strickland, of Valdosta, president of the temporary board of trustees of Woodrow Wilson college who are serving until a national board will be selected.

"It is gratifying to find that the people throughout the entire state are preparing to give their support to the movement to establish Woodrow Wilson college, and that they are doing it not only as a tribute to Wilson, but because they realize how much such a memorial college will mean to Georgia regardless of where in the state it is to be established," he said today.

"The founding of a first-class college where Georgia boys may receive the highest type of training will do much to bring up Georgia's standing in education and will be the means of keeping Wilson's ideals alive."

Governor Backs Plan. Addressing a delegation of business men from Valdosta, who called on Wilson after office hours, Governor Clifford Walker Wednesday promised his full cooperation in the launching of a campaign for the erection of the proposed Woodrow Wilson Memorial college at Valdosta.

"I can see no reason why you should not build a great college in Valdosta for men and boys which would be a credit to Georgia, the south and the nation, and you can count on my full support and cooperation," the governor told the delegation, numbering 25 men.

Indicative of the interest of Wilson's friends throughout the country were the telegrams read by Edgar B. Dunlap.

Notables Wire Approval. William Gibbs McAdoo wired: "Please be assured of my complete sympathy with the purpose of the meeting and of my willingness to assist in every way in my power in the establishment of the proposed college, not alone because of the great service it will render to the citizenship of Georgia and the nation, but because it will be an appropriate memorial to that great man who rendered unexampled service to the cause of education, humanity and democracy, Woodrow Wilson."

The telegram from Melville E. Stone, recently retired president of The Associated Press, said: "I can think of nothing more fitting than the establishment of a memorial college of the sort you propose in Georgia. However, one may have differed from Mr. Wilson as to details, I think no one can challenge his sincere purpose to serve his fellow citizens and humanity as a whole."

Herbert Hoover wired: "Only engagements of long standing prevent my accepting your invitation to the Woodrow Wilson college meeting. I wish you every success in this undertaking."

Governor E. Lee Trinkle, of Virginia, the state where Wilson was born, sent the following greetings: "Virginia wishes you the greatest success in the building of the Woodrow Wilson college. This institution will ever be a builder of men and therefore a builder of nations, the work to which Mr. Wilson devoted his life."

Stockton Axson, brother-in-law of Woodrow Wilson, now professor at Rive Institute, Houston, Texas, wired: "Deeply regret illness prevents acceptance of invitation to participate in meeting designed to promote plan of living memorial to the former Georgian who rose to be first citizen of the nation and world. Surely of a monument to his memory none could have gratified him more than a perpetuation of his educational doctrines, foremost of which was trained preparation for responsible citizenship."

George L. Berry, president of the International Printing Pressmen and Assistants Union of North America, telegraphed from Memphis, Tenn.: "It is with profound regret that I am compelled to advise my inability to be present in Atlanta on the sixth. Please assure your committee that I am in complete sympathy with the great project looking to the establishment of a university as a memorial to America's greatest citizen and the world's most beloved statesman, Woodrow Wilson, and feel at liberty to draft me for service in the real genuinely American project."

A message from Newton D. Baker, formerly secretary of war in Mr. Wilson's cabinet, and a recent visitor to Georgia, said: "I was deeply impressed with the wisdom of the Woodrow Wilson college project as well as the splendid spirit of the men who are pressing the movement. A small college of the highest grade in which educational and express objects will be pursued without distraction by political and partisan complications and in which the faculty and students come together in a fellowship of mutual effort, will, I think, be a fulfillment of one of the great beliefs of President Wilson and I am happy to learn that this great demonstration is to be made in Georgia, a state of vast possibilities and now, I believe, just on the eve of a great education awakening."

Rev. Neal L. Anderson, pastor of the Independent Presbyterian church at Savannah, in the course of which Woodrow Wilson was married, wrote: "I am writing to express my hearty interest in the plans for establishing the Woodrow Wilson college in Georgia, and to assure that I shall do all in my power in cooperating with the committee in establishing this college as a memorial to one whose influence upon world affairs was second to no other man in this generation."

NORTH GEORGIA ROADS BOOSTED BY CITIZENS

Blue Ridge, Ga., May 6.—(Special.) Following the meeting at Ellijay on May day, when 3,000 people attended the special meeting of the Nacoochee-Hiawasse Road and Recreation association, an automobile cavalcade was organized on Saturday morning and proceeded northward through Blue Ridge over state highway No. 5; thence westward to Morganton over the paved section of state route No. 2; thence to Copperhill, Tenn., where visitors were shown through the great smelters and largest sulphuric acid plant in the world. The next 20 miles of the trip carried the party of Georgians and North Carolinians over the famous Kinsey highway to a wonderful spot in the Cherokee national forest, where the Kiwanis club of Copperhill had spread picnic dinner for the occasion.

About 150 people enjoyed this Kiwanis picnic. A number of speakers present on Saturday morning grandeur of the Kinsey highway, and the pleasure of the guests on receiving such splendid entertainment, as well as his personal feeling in the privilege of just having met Dr. Kinsey who had the vision and the courage to promote such a remarkable highway of 19 1/2 miles at a cost of $85,000. Mr. Stone extended an invitation to all present to attend the official highway opening of the Atlanta-Asheville route through Neel Gap, which is being assured that already the Neel Gap was the best advertised road today throughout Tennessee.

The next speaker was R. O. Hamilton, secretary of the Knoxville Automobile club, who assured his hearers of wider publicity for the Kinsey highway in the near future and expressed his pleasure in the complete success of the meeting at Ellijay on the day before. Mr. Hamilton was followed by Honorable T. S. McKinney, of Knoxville, who also predicted a great future for this mountain region before the present summer is over.

The next speaker was Dr. R. W. Kinsey, of Copperhill, who now devotes his entire time to the maintenance and improvement work on the Kinsey highway, and who gave some of his experiences as road commissioner when this project was in its infancy.

Colonel Green Jones, Postmaster James A. Weaver and Commissioner Johnson, all of Ellijay, gave short talks of appreciation and assurance.

APPEAL FOR AID

Inspectors are now employed in a city of 200,000 people and he declared that creation of the office of city fire marshal, with duties to inspect buildings particularly in the congested business area was shown to be imperative.

While nothing had been learned concerning the origin of the blaze, Chief Cody pointed out that the collapse of the second floor of the wooden building housing the Jass Manufacturing company was directly due to overloading of the structure with waste cotton, in which the concern dealt.

Fire Marshal Needed.

"Had this city employed a fire marshal," the chief stated, "six of the finest fellows who ever donned helmet and slicker would not have been buried beneath the smoldering wreckage and killed."

Chief Cody is conducting a probe of the cause of the collapse of the second floor, and members of the fire committee of council late Wednesday unofficially discussed the disaster. A special meeting of the committee failed to draw a quorum, but those present conferred with the chief concerning the tragedy and proposals to avert possibility of a recurrence.

The forces of J. Albert Sharpe, state fire marshal, will be brought in to the probe, it is reported, and every agency of city and state will be enlisted in a determined fight to secure passage of fire protective and preventive legislation in the coming session of the state assembly.

Meanwhile, decision to hold a joint public funeral for the six dead firemen, at 2:30 o'clock Friday afternoon from the city auditorium will give the city an opportunity to pay tribute to the heroic dead and will serve to emphasize the needs of new and adequate fire laws, those interested in the matter pointed out.

Public Funeral Plans.

The public funeral will be made the occasion of a community-wide outpouring to their bravery and sacrifice and is expected to be one of the most impressive events in Atlanta's history. Every fireman who can be spared from duty will attend, Chief Cody stated Wednesday night.

In addition to the six men killed and the five at first reported injured when the second floor of the Decatur street building collapsed at 4 o'clock Wednesday morning, the number of those injured mounted to eight when news was received that two additional men had been overcome by smoke and a third, slightly burned and overcome by smoke.

The full list of the dead and injured follows:

The Dead.

Captain C. O. Bone, 48 Mansfield avenue, company 4.
L. N. Smith, 41 Mills street, company 4.
F. E. Wilson, 260 Atwood avenue, company 4.
Lieutenant R. L. Dennard, 15 Park avenue, company 6.
C. C. King, 104 Highland avenue, company 4.
E. S. Konkole, 142 Brownwood avenue.

The Injured.

W. T. Holt, company 2, overcome by smoke.
R. S. Pressley, assistant chief, 99 Sidney street, shoulder hurt by falling bale of cotton.
J. N. Dillshaw, 15 Bryan street, overcome by smoke.
Z. A. Johnson, 318 South Boulevard, overcome by smoke.
J. H. Anderson, assistant chief, 372 Simpson street, overcome by smoke.
R. F. Turner, 95 Whitehall terrace, of Station No. 4, overcome by smoke.
H. E. Flury, 33 Orme street, Station No. 4, overcome by smoke.
Lieutenant Mark Smith, 16 West End avenue, Station No. 2, burned and overcome by smoke.

Injured Are Improved.

Injuries of Lieutenant Smith and Fireman Turner and Flury were the last reported. Of the three, Lieutenant Smith was the worst injured, receiving slight burns in addition to being overcome by fumes. He was given first-aid treatment and again advice of one of the grady hospital internes on duty at the scene of the fire, he followed the example of Jensen set by the entire department and plunged again into the building to aid in the work of rescue.

What is characterized as the greatest tragedy in the history of the Atlanta fire department occurred just before daylight Wednesday when a vast bulk of waterlogged cotton on the second floor of the Jass company at 321 Decatur street, carrying the entire floor with it, came hurtling down upon the firemen who were battling flames on the first floor of the smoke-darkened building.

Without warning and heralded only by the mighty scream sounded by parting timbers and masonry, the

Injured in Fatal Decatur Street Fire

S. L. KONKOLE.

Above are two views of the two-story wooden structure occupied by the Jass Manufacturing company at 321 Decatur street, showing how the second floor collapsed early Wednesday morning, burying eight members of the Atlanta fire department under a mass of sodden smoldering waste cotton. Six of the eight met their death in this tragedy, two being rescued by the heroism of their comrades. The two X marks indicate the spot where the six men were trapped, all meeting their death in a space not more than 15 feet square. The pictures below show the six members of the department who were trapped and killed in the tragedy.

floor fell in upon the men with an ominous crash whose echoes resounded all over the eastern part of the city. In an instant all was a pandemonium of blinding, choking smoke; of scurrying flames that ate the lives of those who were imprisoned, and shrieks and groans of the dying and injured.

Two Are Rescued.

Of the eight men imprisoned beneath the feathery mass of cotton at the first crash, only two were rescued alive despite heroic efforts of firemen, who disregarded personal safety and plunged with headless desperation into the work of rescue. The two men who were rescued were First Assistant Chief J. A. Anderson and George F. Sockwell. Chief Anderson was painfully injured, but Mr. Sockwell escaped unscathed.

Blaze Not Spectacular.

One of the most remarkable features in connection with the ghastly tragedy lay in the fact that the blaze itself—though unusually stubborn because cotton burns slowly and is hard to extinguish—was neither a serious threat to the Decatur street community nor a spectacular affair. The damage was unofficially estimated at $10,000, the owners of the manufacturing plant being out of the city.

The second floor was piled high with cotton, and when this was saturated by streams of water playing into the building, its sheer weight caused the entire floor to sag and finally to crash through upon the men beneath.

When the crash came, the firemen who were trapped rushed into the eerie darkness in frantic efforts to rescue their comrades, and it was necessary for Chief William B. Cody to call out police reserves and curb the recklessness of his men by force.

Battle to Save Men.

When the first panic of surprise and under Chief Cody's direction, the battle was soon brought under control, though the cotton heaps continued to smoulder and smoke for long hours.

During Wednesday the bodies were removed from the fire trap and were removed to various funeral parlors. Bodies of Captain Bone and Fireman Wilson and Konkole were taken to the chapel of H. M. Patterson & Son; Lieutenant Dennard's body was removed to Greenberg & Bond, and the remains of Fireman King and Smith were placed in the parlors of the Harry Pools company.

All of the slain were veterans in the service, and their sudden and awful death cast a pall of gloom over the entire Atlanta department and over the legion of people whose friendship they had won.

The building in which the great tragedy occurred is owned by the Southern railway and is occupied by the Jass Manufacturing company, engaged in the business of buying waste cotton. It was old, and of frame construction, two stories high; a narrow flight of stairs on the outside leading to the second story.

Both floors were piled high with cotton, and it is believed that the fire had been burning at least half an hour before it was discovered by a freight engineer, who was switching his locomotive in the rear of Decatur street. He immediately sounded his whistle, and the continuous scream of the blast attracted the attention of

Patrolman E. C. Robinson, who sounded an alarm.

Before the flames were conquered the entire department was called out, Company No. 6 being first on the scene and Companies Nos. 4 and 2 arriving immediately after.

Ask Corrective Measures.

Collapse of the second floor is blamed upon overloading, and members of council's fire committee were unanimous in the opinion that immediate corrective measures against similar overloading should be enacted.

"We will ask that the city at once make thorough inspection of all warehouses and old buildings in the fire zones," Alderman Jesse W. Armistead said. "There are at present only two inspectors to do this work, and they are not making competent examination of all buildings at intervals frequent enough to insure safety."

"There should be at least six inspectors for the work. It is not only the danger to firemen—the lives of hundreds of workers in offices, factories and other buildings of Atlanta are imperilled. In case of fire, many would perish in some of the antiquated structures now standing unchallenged."

Views of Chief.

"I believe the second floor of the building was overloaded," Fire Chief Cody said. "We fought the fire not knowing of the tremendous weight overhead. I do not wish to hastily make any accusations of carelessness or neglect, but some time ago there was a fire in that building, and the floor joists, which were partly burned, were never replaced. I believe they were weakened."

"To the great weight of cotton on the second floor, added to that of tons of water we poured into the blaze. I do not believe the falling force was responsible for the floor giving way."

"The fire caught, evidently on the second floor, spreading to the ground floor and the roof. The first alarm was turned in at 2:55, and on the call for help ten minutes later I came down with the wagons."

"The building faces north and south, setting back from the Decatur street front about 150 feet and at the rear abutting on the railroad, giving us handicaps to fight under from the start."

Flames Vee Back.

"About five minutes before the crash, a railroad man came to me and told me the fire was breaking out on the railroad side, and I ran out and sent a wagon and some men around to fight it from that side. I was just about to re-enter the building when the floor gave way."

"The blaze had been burning toward the south, or the railroad, but a minute after the floor crashed it veered, and swept back toward us, putting a wall of fire between us and the 16 unburied, and five more injured, in the building at the time."

"We threw extra hose on the fire and got through, getting out five of the 16 unburied, and five more injured. It required some time to get to the rest, who were literally buried under the waterlogged bales of cotton."

Greatest Tragedy.

The tragedy of Wednesday was the greatest death loss suffered by the Atlanta fire department in many years, Chief Cody stated. One man was killed in 1914 while fighting a fire, and two met a similar death in 1889, he said.

Another death while on active duty was recorded in September, 1922, when Assistant Chief S. B. Chapman was killed when he fell through an elevator shaft while fighting a fire.

Partial asphyxiation by the smoke was the cause of the injuries suffered by the four men hurt in the blaze, besides Assistant Chief Anderson. They were sent to their homes after being treated at Grady hospital.

Chief Cody was loud in his praise of the work of employees of the Western Union Telegraph company and the Georgia Railway & Power company, who volunteered their help in digging out the cotton from over the bodies of the trapped fire-fighters.

The fire was confined to the one building and Chief Cody stated that it would have been a comparatively simple matter to overcome the flames had the second story not craved in.

First efforts to enter the building did not succeed, he said. On the Decatur street side of the building there was on the amount of insurance they will receive. I do not think the good people of Atlanta will allow them to be made homeless.

ATLANTANS ASKED TO AID FIRE VICTIMS

Mr. Bone's family is in almost the same situation. He left no widow and no children, and so, according to the law, other members of his family will receive no pension. He lived with his sister on Mansfield avenue and had supported the household for several years. What is that sister going to do since her sole means of support has been snatched from her in the fight to protect the lives and property of the city of Atlanta?

Mr. Smith, who is survived by a brother and sister, will receive only $1,100, which will be paid him by the Firemen's Benevolent association. Because he was unmarried he will get nothing from the city in return for the life he gave Atlanta unless the good people come to the family's aid.

"Right now is the time for Atlantans to show whether or not they have any appreciation for the service rendered by the heroic men in the fire department. Members of the board of firemasters and myself have requested The Constitution to act as our agent in collecting this fund, and all donations can be sent either to The Constitution office or to the fire department."

Members of the fire committee of council expressed the greatest sorrow for the tragedy which shocked the city, and were unanimous in requesting The Constitution to assist them in collecting a fund to assist families of the dead heroes.

"The fire, with its ghastly consequences, was a terrible thing which has ever happened in the annals of the city," it was stated by Alderman Jesse W. Armistead, chairman of the committee.

"Of course, there is nothing we can do to return these men to life, but we certainly can show our appreciation of the fact that they risked their lives daily, and finally gave up their lives to protect us and our property."

"The city does not pay its firemen enough for them to save anything, and the result is that practically all of them are destitute. The emptiness of the city's pension law never was shown more plainly than right now, as families of two of the men whose lives were snatched from them will not receive a cent."

"I certainly will ask council to make a liberal provision as is possible for the families of all these men, and will do everything in my power to foster a public campaign to assist the families. Through The Constitution, we hope to raise a large enough fund to help some, although no amount of money never can take the place of the lives sacrificed to protect us and our property."

Other members of the committee also expressed their determination to do everything possible to secure financial help for widows and families of the victims.

Families of the three married men who were killed—King, Dennard and Konkole—will be the first to receive compensation under the new pension arrangement put into effect in the fire department last year.

Under a law passed by the legislature in 1921, 1 per cent of each fireman's salary is collected monthly. Insurance companies pay a tax of 1-1/4 per cent on each policy, and one-fifth of the amount of taxes from that source is added to the amount collected from firemen's salaries to make up the pension fund.

However, the proposition applies only to firemen who leave widows or children. Widows of King, Dennard and Konkole will receive half of the amount of their husbands' salaries until they die or remarry.

Families of four of the men—King, Dennard, Smith and Konkole—will receive $100 funeral expenses, and a fund of $1,000 from the Firemen's Benevolent association, of which they were members.

The widows, under a provision of the city code, also will receive the full amount of their husbands' salaries for one year, but no provision is made for families of unmarried firemen killed in performance of duty.

filk, Va., and a sister, Mrs. J. A. Albert.

S. Earl Konkole, the first hero to be rescued from the burned and soggy cotton bales, is survived by his wife, his father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. T. G. Konkole, and a brother, N. H. Konkole. He was a member of company No. 8 and had been identified with the fire department for five years.

In addition to his wife, C. C. King is survived by a son, C. C. King, Jr., and two sisters, Mrs. Robert and Mrs. Mary Cronett.

Captain C. O. Bone is survived by his widow, a son, Ralph A. Dennard, and a daughter, Mrs. G. G. Warren. Also two brothers—Z. G. Dennard, of Atlanta, and E. P. Dennard, of Dalton, Ky., and two sisters, Mrs. J. C. Milton, of Birmingham, Ala., and Mrs. T. W. Duke, of Atlanta.

LONE YOUTH ROBS STORE IN DAYLIGHT

Brandishing a knife and ordering J. M. Kertchessid, manager of the A. & T. company's store at 372 Ormond street, to the rear of the building and then taking a wallet containing several bills from Rev. W. A. Boring, assistant pastor of St. Paul's Methodist church, and commanding the pastor to follow the manager to the rear of the store, a young bandit just before noon Wednesday rifled the store cash register of $31 and fled from the establishment, according to reports made to police.

According to the statement made by Mr. Kertchessid, the man entered the store on the pretext of making a purchase and when the clerk turned to the shelf the bandit drew a long knife and ordered him to the rear of the store.

While engaged in his work with the cash register the bandit was accosted by Mr. Boring, who entered the store and, supposing the bandit to be a clerk, asked him for some bananas. The bandit ordered him to the rear of the store along with the manager after, first taking his wallet.

Mr. Kertchessid rushed to the door with a revolver in his hand as soon as the bandit had left but by the time he reached the street the marauder had disappeared.

Detectives J. J. Cowan, B. P. Gillespie and J. Lewis Whitney have been assigned to the case.

Grief at Tragedy Voiced by Sims At Air Meeting

Savannah, Ga., May 6.—Mayor Walter A. Sims and the Atlanta delegation to the air mail conference were furnished the first information on the Atlanta fire by The Savannah Press, who related to them the Associated Press dispatches. The Atlantans were deeply shocked and the loss of the men was lamented.

Mayor Sims made the following statement:

"I am shocked to hear of the disaster, accident, and deeply grieved over the loss of the men and the injury of others. Atlanta has suffered a great loss, and my sympathy goes out to the bereaved members of the families of the firemen."

"The Atlanta fire department has lost some valuable men who died in the performance of their duty. No city in the country can boast of a more loyal and brave fire department than the city of Atlanta."

Mayor Sims is attempting to communicate by long-distance telephone with the fire officials in Atlanta to get more details on the blaze and loss of men.

"The Homestead," the handsome home of Dr. and Mrs. E. L. Connolly in West End, was again the scene of an elaborate occasion, embodying the spirit of true southern hospitality.

Wednesday afternoon when Dr. and Mrs. Connolly entertained in honor of Mrs. and Mrs. Thomas Whipple Connolly who have recently returned from their wedding journey, the reception also celebrating the eighty-eighth birthday of Dr. Connolly, beloved pioneer citizen of the city.

Mothers' Day Is Next Sunday

The measure of appreciation by Mother next Sunday for whatever gift of remembrance will not vary with its value. Hers is a sentiment beyond the earth.

Her happiness will be supreme in the pride she'll feel in those loved ones who will bring flowers and affection, marking appropriately another milestone along Life's highway.

Women and men whose appearance will be immaculate on this day of days will be made happy as a mother's compliment, for certainly it is a mother who loves most this distinction.

Looking their best in appearance on Mothers' Sunday is an attribute of patrons of Stoddard.

SLAMS SALAAMS

AND Louise Dooly

WE were born and brought up in Atlanta, a boosting town. Then we transferred to Asheville, which is another. Now we find ourselves busily boosting one to the other.

For instance, in Atlanta at present we never see a woman of the "organized" group that we do not greet her with—

"Did you know that the National Council of Women is going to meet in Asheville in October?"

And it is remarkable how often the answer is:

"That will be a good excuse for an Asheville trip."

Then, we'll have to engage a secretary to write to all the Atlanta people we have promised to notify, on our return to Asheville, when the laurel and the rhododendron are in bloom. They want to motor up.

RIGHT in the midst of the thrills we got out of the Metropolitan Opera company's season here, too, we found time to write to Asheville for a reservation for the concert there on May 6th by the Philadelphia Festival Orchestra and Bloomfield Zeisler. We have heard the great pianist several times, and that is why we want to repeat the experience.

AND yet—here comes the promise of some more frivolity in Atlanta on the same date.

Only a week later, too, that admirable high-brow prospect opens up in Atlanta—the second annual exhibit of paintings and sculpture from the New York Central Art Galleries.

What's that old song about being constant to one love "were tother dear charmer away?"

TAKING THE JOY OUT.

LOOKING around us these spring days on the bright-hued costumes of the women, not to speak of the sprightly effects the men secure in their attire, we are obliged to be reminded of the rather lugubrious grandmother who visited her grandson at college.

She found him in a campus costume which included some such colorful combination as yellow tie, green socks and striped sweater. Or may be it was just balloon tire trousers in the prevailing baby blue, with red tie and hose.

Anyway, she looked him over disapprovingly, and when he admitted that these were about his soberest clothes, "Suppose," she suggested darkly, "you should get bad news, and should suddenly be called home by a death in the family. How would you face it in those clothes?"

Now, of course, that is an unduly dark outlook.

But most of us would certainly have to borrow an outfit for attendance on a funeral.

IT DOESN'T GET YOU ANY.

WHERE.

A WOMAN was telling us recently about an incident of a visit she and her husband made to the Grand Canyon of Colorado.

Their guide was a man of education, but he had spent most of his life among the crudest of companions in the west. He showed very plainly that in spite of his long familiarity with the natural magnificences they were getting their first glimpse of, he was himself as much impressed by it as if it were likewise his introduction to it.

And here was the significant thing: "This canyon," he told them, "cured me of the habit of profanity. I had been living for years among men with whom profanity was apparently as much their native tongue as English, and their habit easily became mine."

"When I first saw this wondrous beautiful place, my first reaction was expressed in profanity. But the sound of it in such surrounding came back to me with a shock. And I could never again be capable of unworthy language in the presence of such a manifestation of God."

"Gradually I felt myself forced to drop it altogether."

WHICH story reminds us of the recent news item about the three thousand New York policemen, members of the Holy Name Society, who attended in a body a church service arranged especially for the society, whose aim is to honor the sacred name, and thus intentionally to discourage taking that name in vain.

And that reminds us of something else.

We don't drive our own car, and for some time we have motored very little with women drivers.

So we did not know until we were told recently that there is a new code of language etiquette (?) for women who do.

"Men," we are told, "are so unbearable as drivers of the 'other' car that women just have to resort to men's own language to deal with them."

AND that finally brings up the inevitable question: are women sure enough of such mastery of men's codes that they can afford yet to throw over their own, imperfect, as they may be, imperfect, but somehow long serviceable and fairly well lived by?

SOME MAN'S WIFE.

Speaking of new codes—our idea of gorgeous waste of valuable time is the present effort of the National Woman's Party to force a constitutional amendment or something by

To Be Honored Today

Mrs. Walter Scott Coleman, regent of the Joseph Habersham chapter, D. A. R., who will be honor guest today at the luncheon at which Mrs. Charles Lorisand will entertain at her home on East Fifteenth street, following a meeting of the board of management of the chapter at 11 o'clock.

which married women would be allowed passports under their maiden names.

If Mrs. Thomas Jones, for instance, has gotten a little public notice because she wrote a book on "Marriage and Other Outworn Customs," or because she rode horse back in evening dress into a crowded Broadway cafe, it does seem a pity, she naturally believes, that when she travels abroad, all Europe should not know instantly who the celebrity is whom Europe has the distinction of entertaining at that moment.

There is no question of the right of Tom Mix or Jackie Coogan to capitalize their fame under their own names in London or Paris or Rome. Then why should Daisy Delight, when she seeks new fields for publicity have to retire when she travels, under the irksome mask of respectability, and go under the name of a mere husband, as Mrs. Thomas Jones?

When you think of the humiliation of it, nothing short of a constitutional amendment is worthy to right such a wrong!

THE VIOLET RESUSCITATED?

ARCHAEOLOGISTS pottering around in northern Africa have taken on a responsibility which is so far out of their legitimate field that we question whether they can get away with it.

They have unearthed at Leptis Magna what they or the newspapers have christened a "Blushing Venus," so beautiful—and in a perfect state of preservation—that there is a chance—so the archaeologists or their press agents state—that she will throw the old model of feminine pulchritude—the Venus di Milo—into the discard.

Pink marble? O, no.

The "blushing" description suggests, we are told, the lady's pose, her air of modesty.

There are two reasons why we suspect she will have a hard time supplanting in the woman's favor the Milo one.

One reason is that it is only recently that the women have finally been permitted by fashion to have a waistline approximating that of the Venus di Milo, and they like it. It is the first time they have been comfortable since about the year 600.

The other reason? Well, haven't you guessed it?

Tech Marionettes To Present Play At Woman's Club

A well-known Atlanta boy, Fraser Law, is playing the leading role in the new play of the Tech Marionettes, "The Bad Man," to be presented at the Atlanta Woman's club auditorium May 15 and 16. Law has played leading roles with the Marionettes for two years now and has several successes to his credit. He is supported by an unusually competent cast in his latest play.

The leading feminine role in "The Bad Man" is taken by Clifton Campbell, of Long Island, New York. The ingenue role is played by Jerry Kelly, of Augusta, Ga., who has taken similar parts in other Marionette plays. David Harland, of Belfast, Ireland, has a heavy part to carry as one of the villains, while William Ware, of Columbus, Ga., takes another villain's role with realistic effect. Ed Weatherly, of Macon, is the hero. Henry Ligon, star character actor of the Marionettes who has recently played in several plays with the Lyric players, is seen at his best as the invalid uncle of the hero. William Scherffus, of Pretoria, South Africa, has been assigned a role somewhat different to those in which he has formerly appeared and takes the part of a cowboy. John Fritchard, J. H. Collins and William Kidolph complete the cast.

Reservations for the two performances may be made by calling the Georgia Tech Y. M. C. A.

The removal of patches of Sarah's skin took place August 17, 1923, the suit avers. The skin, according to attorneys for the child, was grafted on a child of the Finers who was badly burned and later died.

The Love Cycle

BY MILDRED BARBOUR

The New Woman.

Dora Davidson's apartment reflected her personality in a clever fashion. She had none of the conventional articles of furniture in vogue at that particular period. It seemed that she must have combed the antique shops thoroughly to collect such quaint old pieces of mahogany, such bits of tapestry dim with age, a painting or two which was obviously of ancestral origin—though not her own. She had, here and there, brilliant splashes of color in lacquer, brass, and there were quaintly-framed little mirrors tucked in odd corners to reflect the pleasing ensemble.

She herself was garbed in black on the evening when Mansfield first met her, a soft, silken, clinging black, in a period when other women were wearing stiff heavy fabrics with flaring silhouettes. There were red pendant earrings drooping from under her smoothly-dressed hair and a heavy chain of the same red ornaments encircled her soft throat and fell nearly to her knees.

She looked so foreign that Mansfield remarked it and inquired if she were not Spanish.

"American," she said laughingly, "but everyone makes the mistake in my nationality. As a matter of fact my grandmother was Spanish and I resemble her more closely than I do my own parents."

"Everyone on the boat last year took you for a foreigner," Harrison remarked. "Miss Davidson and I crossed on the same ship," he explained to Mansfield. "Quite a coincidence her coming to make her home here, wasn't it?"

Mansfield agreed, but he wondered just how much coincidence there was about it. Later when he got to know her better, he took back that thought, believing it to be unworthy of a charming and talented woman.

"Where are all your satellites tonight, Dora?" Harrison inquired.

"Looks unusually quiet here," she nodded languidly, leaning gracefully back on a divan crowded with brocade pillows.

"There are a number of big parties in town tonight, I believe," Harrison laughed and lit a cigarette.

"All the husbands doing escort duty, eh?"

She smiled and Mansfield, watching her with a fascination which he could not resist, noted that there was something a trifle feline and malicious in the curve of her lips over her little white sharp teeth.

"Too bad," Harrison went on. "Mansfield and I were bored to death with a lecture at the club and I promised him a good change here."

"Do you want cards?" she inquired listlessly, making a half movement to rise.

"No use, for only three," he decided, "but I think a drink or two wouldn't be amiss."

"There is wine on ice and a bottle of whiskey in the cupboard," she shrugged. "You know where the glasses are. Help yourself."

When Harrison returned from a short session in the dining room, he carried a tray with a bottle, cracked ice and to Mansfield's surprise—only two glasses.

"You don't wish anything, Miss Davidson?" he inquired.

"She shook her head."

"Dora doesn't drink—not even punch," Harrison laughed. "It's a marvel to me how she stands for us sitting around absorbing liquor and growing loquacious over it. But she's a model hostess—never acts bored, or looks tired, even when we know she must be ready to drop."

She began with her abruptly and wandered to an old-fashioned piano in the corner, over which a piece of beautiful brocade was flung. It was almost a colonial harpsichord and when she touched it, it gave forth tones of mellow sweetness. She seated herself and without invitation, began to play softly.

She began with Chopin and rambled into Schubert, dropped finally into Grieg and ended with a gay little Viennese waltz by an obscure composer. She played exquisitely, softly, feelingly. With her head thrown back showing the soft curve of her slender throat, her eyes half closed, she seemed to have forgotten her callers, to be weaving melodies for her own moment of reverie. The cleverly-shaded lights brought out the sheen of her hair and emphasized the smooth ivory of her bare arms.

Mansfield was completely captivated. He had never before met a woman with so strong physical charm and attraction. He had never seen such perfect poise and composure, such complete assurance of her own attraction.

He glanced at Harrison and saw that he, too, was gazing at their hostess with unmistakably fascinated eyes. And Harrison, he knew, was a connoisseur of feminine beauty and had the reputation of being impervious.

"He went home finally like a man in a daze, with his fingers tingling pleasantly and his heart beating wildly," he said to Mansfield, "and he had the reputation of being impervious."

GLADIOLI

The talk on gladioli had wandered far afield into untrodden paths of crossing and selection, but it had helped the student gardener to understand the subject better and to appreciate something of the experiments which Mr. Burbank had carried on so extensively with the gladioli.

"We have had the gladioli in our gardens for only about a hundred years," he said, "as it was introduced into Europe from South Africa and from there found its way to the American continent."

"One of the earliest products of hybridizing was the gladioli gaudavensis, and being a hybrid, the results showed a wide range of variation in form and color."

"I should think so many changes of location and climate, from South Africa to Europe, then to the American continent and finally to California would greatly have affected the development of the gladioli."

"Yes," said Mr. Burbank, "changes of seasons, soils and climates often produce variability and when hybridization was added the gladioli of today became both responsive and adaptable."

"I have been working for over 40 years with gladioli and have raised new crossed seedlings by the acre, so that I have had plenty of material for selection. While the colors in the early hybrids were very fine, the stalks were too slender and the blossoms too far apart, and moreover withered quickly in the glare of the summer sun."

"Did you produce some new colors?"

"Yes," said Mr. Burbank, "but more improvement was made in intensifying and purifying the colors and distributing and arranging the shades in more pleasing combinations."

COLOR CUT-OUTS Hansel and Grethel

THE WICKED WITCH.

This is one day's chapter of the story of "Hansel and Grethel." Cut out and save the paper dolls and soon you will have the whole set.

The door of the little house opened and an old woman came out. "Ab, my dear children, how came you here?" she asked. "You must come indoors and stay with me," and she led them into the little house, gave them all that they could eat, and put them in two little white beds to sleep. Now, this old woman, although she seemed so kind, was really a wicked witch who lay in wait for children. She had built the cake and candy house to catch them.

(This lovely dress and hat are of pink satin. Cut them out and save them till the end of the story, when you will find how Grethel came to have them. Tomorrow we shall see the old witch.)

THROW AWAY OLD VOLUME

Publishers Forewarn Condition and Were Prepared for It.

Now that it comes out that the publishers of the New Universities Dictionary abandoned the printing plates from which their former dictionary was printed, it seems reasonable to assume that all old dictionaries are out of date.

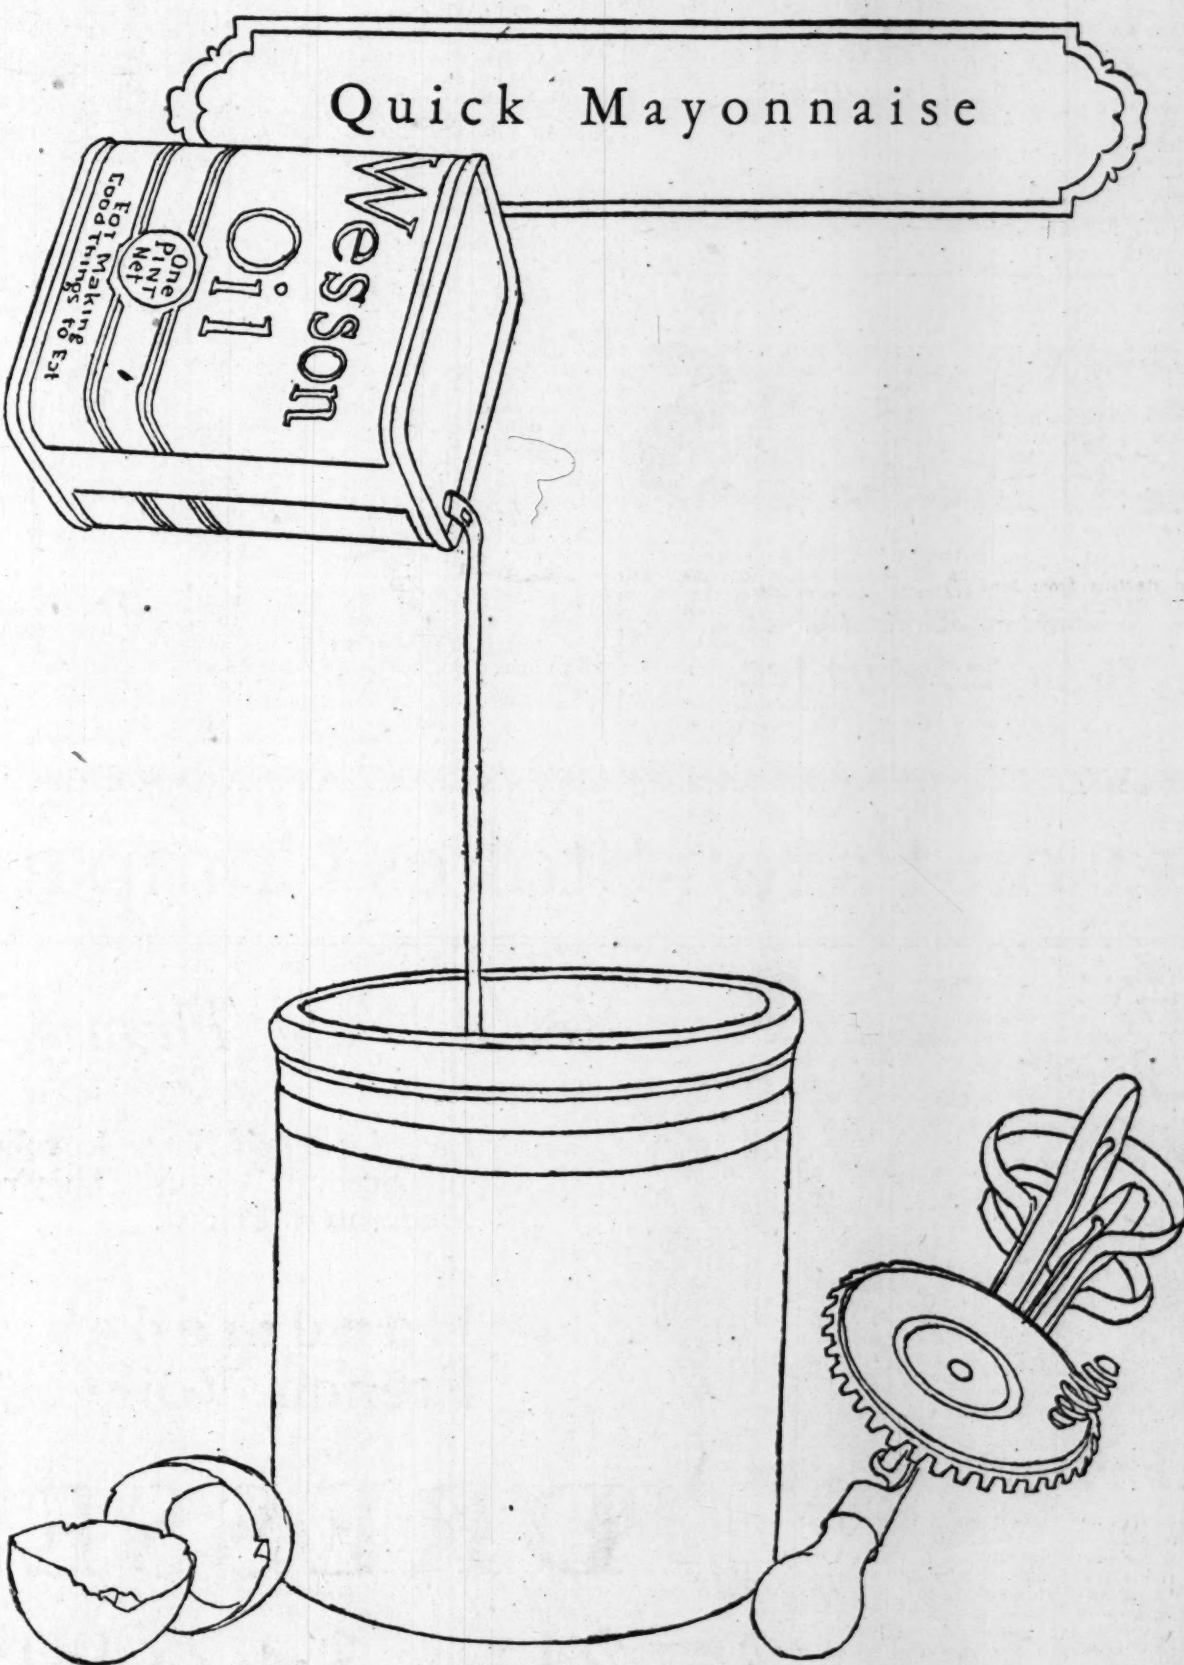

It appears that in recent years there has been more of a change in the language than is generally realized. Due to the advancement of science and invention, thousands of new words have come into daily use. This also necessitated numerous new meanings to existing words, and many improvements in pronunciation have also been adopted.

The publishers of the new dictionary saw these conditions far ahead and made preparations accordingly. So now they come out with an entirely new compilation that far surpasses any similar volume ever issued. It is being distributed only to newspaper readers as explained in the coupon printed elsewhere in this issue.

You can't depend upon that old dictionary now; so throw it away and get this newly compiled volume with its enlarged vocabulary and its numerous special features.—(adv.)

ARMY FLIER HURT IN PLANE JUMP NEAR OHIO FIELD

Cleveland, Ohio, May 6.—Major Henry Taylor, army flier, stationed in Columbus, was injured severely today when he jumped from his airplane when the control stick broke as he was flying 1,500 feet above Botzum, Ohio, six miles north of Akron. Taylor was brought to a Cleveland hospital, where physicians say he suffered no fractures.

Few things are easier to make than good mayonnaise. Wesson Oil and a fresh egg—beaten together and seasoned to taste—and you have a mayonnaise you'll be proud of!

Quickest results are obtained if the oil and egg are not too cold. The ordinary temperature of your kitchen is just right.

Break an egg in a bowl—Add about a tablespoonful of Wesson Oil. Beat vigorously with an egg beater or a fork—until the oil and egg are thoroughly mixed. How long will that take? Perhaps while you count fifty—not as fast as you can count but as fast as you can beat.

Add another tablespoonful of oil and beat again—vigorously. Two tablespoonfuls and beat again. Two or three more and beat again.

Your mayonnaise will begin to thicken a little. Then add Wesson Oil four or five tablespoonfuls at a time, beating well after each addition—until your mayonnaise is as thick and stiff as you want it. The more oil you beat into it the thicker your mayonnaise will be—about two cupfuls is the usual amount. [Never add more than a quarter cupful of oil at any one time.]

After your mayonnaise is made, add seasoning. Mix a half teaspoonful of salt, a teaspoonful each of sugar and mustard, a generous pinch each of paprika and red pepper—add a tablespoonful of lemon juice or vinegar and stir until the salt and sugar are dissolved—then pour into the mayonnaise and beat well.

With Wesson Oil Mayonnaise as a base you can make many delicious fancy salad dressings in a very few minutes—for instance—

THOUSAND ISLAND DRESSING

To a cupful of Wesson Oil mayonnaise you add a third of a cupful of Chili Sauce, a third of a cupful of whipped cream, two tablespoonfuls of chopped sour or sweet pickles or chow chow and one chopped pimiento. Combine ingredients in order given.

Unlike Any Story You Have Ever Read

The Lost World

BY SIR ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE

Then in a moment came the panic and the collapse. Screaming and howling, the great creatures rushed away in all directions through the brushwood, while our allies yelled in their savage delight, following swiftly after their flying enemies. All the feuds of countless generations, all the hatreds and cruelties of their narrow history, all the memories of ill-usage and persecution were to be purged that day. At last man was to be supreme and the man-beast to find forever his allotted place. Fly as they would, the fugitives were too slow to escape from the active savages, and from every side in the tangled woods we heard the exultant yells, the twanging of bows, and the crash and thud as ape-men were brought down from their hiding places in the trees.

I was following the others, when I found that Lord John and Challenger had come across to join us.

"It's over," said Lord John. "I think we can leave the tidying up to them. Perhaps the less we see of it the better we shall sleep."

Challenger's eyes were shining with the lust of slaughter.

"We have been privileged," he cried, strutting about like a peacock, "to be present at one of the typical decisive battles of history—the battles which determined the fate of the world. What, my friends, is the conquest of one nation by another? It is meaningless. Each produces the same result. But those fierce fights, when in the dawn of the ages the cave-dwellers held their own against the tiger folk, or the elephants first found that they had a master, those were the real conquests—the victories that count. By this strange turn of fate we have seen and helped to decide even such a contest. Now upon this plateau the future must ever be for man."

It needed a robust faith in the end to justify such tragic means. As we advanced together through the woods we found the ape-men lying thick, transfixed with spears or arrows. Here and there a little group of shattered Indians marked where one of the anthropoids had turned to bay, and sold his life dearly. Always in front of us we heard the yelling and roaring which showed the direction of the pursuit. The ape-men had been driven back to their city, they had made a last stand there, once again they had been broken, and now we were in time to see the final fearful scene of all. Some eighty or a hundred males, the last survivors, had been driven across that same little clearing which led to the edge of the cliff, the scene of our own exploit two days before. As we arrived the Indians, a semicircle of spearmen, had closed in on them, and in a minute it was over. Thirty or forty had died where they stood. The others, screaming and clawing, were thrust over the precipice, and went hurtling down as their prisoners had of old, on to the sharp bamboo six hundred feet below. It was as Challenger had said and the sign of man was assured forever in Maple White Land. The males were exterminated, the females and young were driven away to live in bondage, and the long rivalry of untold centuries had reached its bloody end.

For us the victory brought much advantage. One again we were able to visit our camp and get at our stores. Once more also we were able to communicate with Zombo, who had been terrified by the spectacle of our men, and an avalanche of spears falling from the edge of the cliff.

"Come away, Massas, come away!" he cried, his eyes starting from his head. "The devil get you sure if you stay up there."

"It is the voice of sanity!" said Summerlee with conviction. "We have had adventures enough and there are neither suitable to our character nor our position. I hold you to your word, Challenger. From now onwards you devote your energies to getting us out of this horrible country and back once more to civilization."

CHAPTER XV.
"Our Eyes Have Seen Great Wonders."

I write this from day to day, but I trust that before I come to the end of it, I may be able to say that the light shines, at least through our clouds. We are held here with no clear means of making our escape, and bitterly we chafe against it. Yet, I can well imagine that the day may come when we may be glad that we were kept, against our will, to see something more of the wonders of this singular place, and of the creatures who inhabit it.

The victory of the Indians and the annihilation of the ape-men, marked the turning point of our fortunes. From then onwards, we were in truth masters of the plateau, for the natives looked upon us with a mixture of awe and gratitude, since by our savior powers we had aided them to destroy their hereditary foe. For their own sakes they would, perhaps, be glad to see the departure of such formidable and incalculable people, but they have no doubt that we are the greatest way by which we may reach the plains below. There had been, so far as we could follow their signs, a tunnel by which the place could be approached, the lower exit of which we had seen from below. By this, no doubt, both ape-men and Indians had at different epochs reached the top, and Maple White Land, their common shrine, had taken the same way. Only the year before, however, there had been a terrific earthquake and the upper end of the tunnel had fallen in, and completely disappeared. The Indians now could only shake their heads and shrug their shoulders when we expressed by signs our desire to descend. It may be that they will not help us to get away.

At the end of the victorious campaign the surviving ape-folk were driven across the plateau (their walls were horrible) and established in the neighborhood of the Indian caves, where they would, from now onwards, be a servile race under the eyes of their masters. It was a rude, raw, primitive version of the Jews in Babylon or the Israelites in Egypt. At night we could hear from amid the trees the long-drawn cry as some primitive Ezekiel mourned for fallen glories of Ape Town. Flowers of wood and drawers of water, such were they from now onwards.

We had returned across the plateau with our allies two days after the battle, and made our camp at the foot of the cliffs. They would have had us share their caves with them, but Lord John would by no means consent to it, considering that to do so would put us in their power if they were treacherously disposed. We kept our independence, therefore, and had our weapons ready for any emergency, while preserving the most friendly relations. We also continually visited their caves, which were most remarkable places, though whether made by man or by Nature we have never been able to determine. They were all on the one stratum, hollowed out of some soft rock which lay between the volcanic basalt forming the ridge cliffs above them, and the hard granite which formed their base.

The openings were about eight feet above the ground, and were let up to by long stone stairs, so narrow

Vanderbilt Invited To Attend Meeting Of President's Club

Cornelius Vanderbilt, Jr., publisher of a number of newspapers, who recently visited Atlanta, has been invited to attend the meeting of the President's club at the Biltmore hotel Saturday night, at which time the club will get behind a movement to "demonstrate the necessity of the United States being thoroughly equipped with airplanes."

In the message Mr. Vanderbilt also was extended the appreciation of the President's club, officers and directors of the Southern Fair association and other organizations for the sized editorial which appeared recently in the San Francisco Illustrated Daily Herald, in which Atlanta was highly praised.

Word was received Wednesday from Senator William J. Harris expressing regret that, owing to press of official business, would prevent his attendance. Several prominent men already have accepted invitations to the dinner which, in addition to stressing the importance of a greater national air force, is expected to add impetus to Georgia's movement to win a place on one of the proposed government air mail routes.

Another $1,000 Death Claim Paid; Get Your Protection

Bringing the total of funds it has sent to Georgia and southern homes suddenly deprived of earnings of their breadwinners to over $22,000, The Constitution, in a full-page advertisement in this issue announces payment of another $1,000 death claim insured under the provisions of its sensational $5,000 Travel Accident Insurance policy.

This payment has been made through the North American Accident Insurance company of Chicago to Sarah Jones, administrator of the estate of Eugene Jones (colored), of 225 West Hunter street, Atlanta, holder of one of The Constitution's accident policies, who was killed in an automobile accident while driving in Atlanta.

Eugene Jones was wise enough in life to recognize the worth of a $1 investment that paid dividends a thousand fold, and as a result, his mother, Sarah Jones, has been paid the sum of $1,000 at a time when she needs it most. When the check was presented to her, she declared it was "a God-send" to her, and she strongly urged everyone to take advantage of the unparalleled investment opportunity offered its subscribers by The Constitution.

Despite the fact that The Constitution is drawing attention almost daily to the ever-growing accident menace and warning its readers to protect themselves with its sensational economical and efficient insurance, it is a rare case that one of the long list of dead in auto accidents can claim benefits of the policies offered.

Coupled with news of payment of an additional $1,000 death fund, another warning is sounded to you. You never know when your time will come; your name may head the list of dead or maimed tomorrow. Protect your loved ones with a $5,000 Travel Accident Policy under the unprecedented offer of The Constitution, the most liberal made by any southern newspaper. This policy costs only $1 per year in addition to the regular subscription rates of The Daily and Sunday Constitution, and in return you receive the following sweeping protective features:

$5,000 travel accident death, the policy increasing 10 per cent per year to $7,500 in five years; $2,000 automobile death, the policy increasing 10 per cent per year to $3,000 in five years; $1,000 pedestrian accident death, the policy increasing 10 per cent per year to $1,500 in five years; large cash sums for permanent injuries and $10 weekly indemnity for disability incurred in certain specified accidents.

Take no chances. Tomorrow may be too late. Write, phone or visit The Constitution's insurance department today and get your protection.

NEW CRISIS FACED IN BALKAN DISPUTE

BY CHARLES M. McCANN.

London, May 6.—Another flare-up is imminent in the Balkans.

The approaching trouble may be even more serious than the most recent upheaval, during which Yugoslavia all but sent troops across the Bulgarian border after Bulgarian politicians and newspapers declared that the plot to murder King Boris and destroy the Bulgarian government with a bomb had been fostered in Belgrade and tacitly approved by Yugoslavia officials.

Must Demobilize Troops.
By June 1 Bulgaria must demobilize the 10,000 additional militiamen granted her by the council of ambassadors in Paris for the specific purpose of putting down the revolution for which the blast of the Sveti Kral cathedral bomb was the signal.

The allies expect Premier Zankoff to do his utmost to avoid demobilization on the pretext that the Bulgarian situation still is so serious that military retrenchment would have the state to rebel attacks which it could not withstand.

Zankoff is expected to play for time by any means that presents itself. It is not to be expected that the 10,000 men in service is not granted by the allies; the first move, of course, will be a request for an extension of the time limit.

Angry Reactions.
If the demobilization is not complete by June 1 there will be angry reactions in Yugoslavia and Greece. These countries already have concentrated large bodies of troops along the Bulgarian frontiers and these will be reinforced to the limit of Greek and Yugoslav ability if the 40,000 Bulgarian remnant under arms beyond the agreed upon date.

There would be quite as much disagreeable feeling in Athens and Belgrade if the ambassadors should grant an extension of the demobilization time limit. Bulgaria is suspected in ever Balkan capital and an addition to her army might strike sparks in every corner of the tinder box.

Rumania Sympathetic.
Rumania is sympathetic, as the Russian menace on her eastern frontier makes Zankoff's plea, that a presented also at the carnival, Miss Scott said.

The memorial house was built by the Atlanta club in memory of Miss Anna Young, who was a beloved faculty member, and who died while teaching at the college. The house has a large bed room and a fitting room for alumni, who visit the college during commencement and other special events.

communist outbreak in Bulgaria is inevitable unless the 10,000 militiamen remain under arms, seem more plausible in Belgrade than in the other Balkan capitals.

The allies are endeavoring to persuade Yugoslavia and Greece to persuade Bulgaria to handle the demobilization negotiations, as it is feared that, otherwise, some incident, perhaps a trivial one, might cause the troops massed along the Bulgarian frontiers to invade the country.

LOS ANGELES FLIES AROUND PORTO RICO

Mayaguez, Porto Rico, May 6.—After having flown completely around the island of Porto Rico and across the Virgin islands today, the U. S. navy dirigible Los Angeles returned to Mayaguez shortly after 6 o'clock this evening, circled over the bay and was moored again to the mast of the tender Patoka. Altogether, the airship was aloft eight hours during her flight.

The weather conditions were ideal. The airship circled over San Juan between 12:30 and 1 p. m. The school children throughout the island were given a recess that they might see the first dirigible ever to visit the West Indies.

All during the trip, the aircraft flew at a low altitude and did not attempt to make more than normal cruising speed.

Before taking off today, Captain Steele, commander of the Los Angeles, said there had been no change in his plan to start on the return flight to Mayaguez at 10 o'clock tomorrow morning. If possible, the southern route will be used, following the coast of the United States northward from southern Florida to the harbor in Lakehurst.
